Ed Schieffelin's Grave.
Tombstone's Bird Cage.
The Biggest Grizzly.
Chico Bola de Oro.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

CIENAGA RANCH, Arizpe District, Northern Sonora, Feb. 24.

TO GET here you come out of Mexico at Nogales and drive 150 miles, going back into Mexico from Southern Arizona through the border town of Naco, whence this is wired.

SCHIEFFELIN came to this country, then ruled by bloodthirsty Apaches, in 1877, following detachments of United States soldiers, prospecting as he came. Soon, he left the soldiers, who told him:

"You'll find no gold, but you'll find your tombstone."

He did find gold, and silver and copper, and when the gold rush started a town near his first location, he called it Tombstone.

HE LIKED to wander and prospect and tried to sell his strike for $10,000. No one would buy. He worked it himself and then refused $150,000 for it. He worked a while longer, and sold out for $600,000 and he went, not to New York or Paris, but off again prospecting.

That was his nature.

Nineteen years later, in 1896, while prospecting far off, east of Canyonville, in Oregon, he died, alone in the doorway of his little cabin.

His will read:

"It is my wish, if convenient, to be buried in the dress of a prospector, my old pick and canteen with me, on top of Granite Hills, about three miles westerly from the city of Tombstone, Ariz., and that a monument such as prospectors build when locating a mining claim be built over my grave, and no other slab or monument be erected. Under no circumstances do I want to be buried in any graveyard or cemetery."

He wanted freedom, dead or alive.

THERE HE lies with automobiles rolling by, on the smooth highway that his feet never knew, past the formal graveyard with its neat fence, on the other side of the highway, and on to a "City of Tombstone" that he would not recognize.

Tombstone is civilized and dying. No cowboys shoot, no miners slap their bags of dust on the bar, to treat all hands. The courthouse, built in 1882, is abandoned and dark. The Cochise County seat was moved to Bisbee, Ariz., last year, and Bisbee is building a new $300,000 courthouse.

YOU READ in big letters, "Bird Cage Theater" over a wooden shack near Tombstone's old courthouse. But the Bird Cage is closed forever. The birds that lived there once, poor birds in red dresses, their faces painted and eyes tired, have gone. The "Helldorado," the old wooden saloons are closed. No more shuffling of the faro deck in gambling houses by white-faced dealers that got the gold dust and nuggets, as fast as miners collected them.

No "likker" to be got in Tombstone now. You may buy an ice cream soda, or a nut sundae. There is a good gasoline station, the Owl Cafe provides excellent meals, and Lem Hilton, proprietor, if you please him, will tell you about Tombstone in the old days. He picks and chooses, printing on each page of his bill-of-fare:

"We reserve the right to refuse service to anyone."

WHERE ARE the forlorn girls that used to bring business to the Bird Cage, and where is Ed Schieffelin? Life in an eternity with streets of gold would bore him. He liked to prospect for his gold, while he looked out for Apaches, not daring to light a fire.

Does kind Providence provide him with rocks that he can tap, veins of promising ore, "good float" to make life interesting? Very likely, the "many mansions" may not all be equally dull.

COMING ON to this ranch 5,000 feet up, where the Elias family keep thousands of Hereford cattle on 300,000 acres of land, you pass the copper towns, thousands of workers earning good wages, and stockholders far away earning good dividends.

Calumet and Arizona, Phelps Dodge and Shattuck mines are here, with the great Cananea mines just across the Mexican border. Intelligent Mr Ryan has got control of that last great property for the Anaconda Company, with 100,000 acres of land, now feeding 50,000 head of stock for the Cananea Cattle Company.

How much wealth lies beneath the mountains on those hundred thousand acres? Hundreds of millions of dollars have been taken from this land, opened by Schieffelin in spite of the Apaches.

ALL THESE giant cattle pastures are well fenced. To reach this ranch upon which the sun is now rising you leave the main road running from Naco to Cananea, and drive across the grass, 25 miles over many "cattle guards," rows of iron bars set a few inches apart.

The cattle think their feet would be caught between the bars, and will not cross, which makes gates unnecessary. They would have thought so 10,000 years ago, and will think so 10,000 years hence. They could jump or step over them, but unlike men, they have relied on

By E. W. PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 24.—A slashing attack on the political, Public Service Commission and war board contacts of Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Ellis Ames Ballard, of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, today ended in an uproar before the Senate committee investigation of public utilities.

The Governor's counsel, William A. Gray, in a series of rapid questions to Ballard, was interrupted by Charles J. Hepburn, committee counsel, Chairman Earnest, anti-Pinchot man, joined in the interference against Gray, and for a moment the hearing was checked while the Governor's counsel demanded that he be allowed to question the witnesses without interruption. Gray shot out at Hepburn:

"You cannot be rude to me and interrupt. I won't stand for it."

EARNEST RAPS GAVEL

Earnest rapped with his gavel:

"Give the witness a chance to answer you."

The interchange broke up an important series of questions in which Gray was attempting to link Ballard, Atterbury and others with James S. Benn, member of the Public Service Commission, whom Senator Woodward, of Philadelphia last week called "Mitten's errand boy." Mitten formerly was head of the transit company.

The enmity between Atterbury and Pinchot was emphasized by Atterbury on the stand, who ad-

HIGH COURT SUSTAINS DRY LAW

Judge Clark's Decision Attacking 18th Amendment Upset by Supreme Justices

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Prohibition is legal.

By unanimous vote, the United States Supreme Court today held the Eighteenth Amendment to be valid, and indorsed the practice of ratifying constitutional amendments by state legislatures.

It thus reversed the decision of Judge William T. Clark, the young New Jersey jurist, who startled the country last December by ruling that the amendment was invalid because it had never been properly ratified. Judge Clark's decision contended that the amendment should have been ratified by state constitutional conventions because it involved a transfer of police powers to the federal government.

ROBERTS' OPINION

The high court's decision was rendered by Justice Owen J. Roberts, the junior member of the court, and all the others concurred.

Justice Roberts held that Judge Clark erred when he based his decision "upon the theories of political science" rather than on the cold law of the case.

The Constitution, Justice Roberts said, provides two methods of ratifying the amendments—one by referring it to the state legislatures and one to state constitutional conventions. Congress has the power to make the choice, he said.

The decision of Judge Clark and argument of attorneys, Justice Roberts said, asked the Supreme Court to read something into the amendment that is not there. He asserted the question of proper ratification had been considered by the court in its original decision in 1920 upholding the Eighteenth Amendment, although it was not directly raised. The question also was considered in the Hawkes-Ohio case, he said.

ALL POINTS REJECTED

Every point raised in support of Judge Clark's decision was overruled.

While attorneys supporting the Clark decision said that the Eighteenth Amendment took away powers not taken by any other amendment, Justice Roberts denied this. Several other amendments, notably those affecting Negroes, are similar, he asserted. The historic decision was the first read of many handed down after a three week's recess.

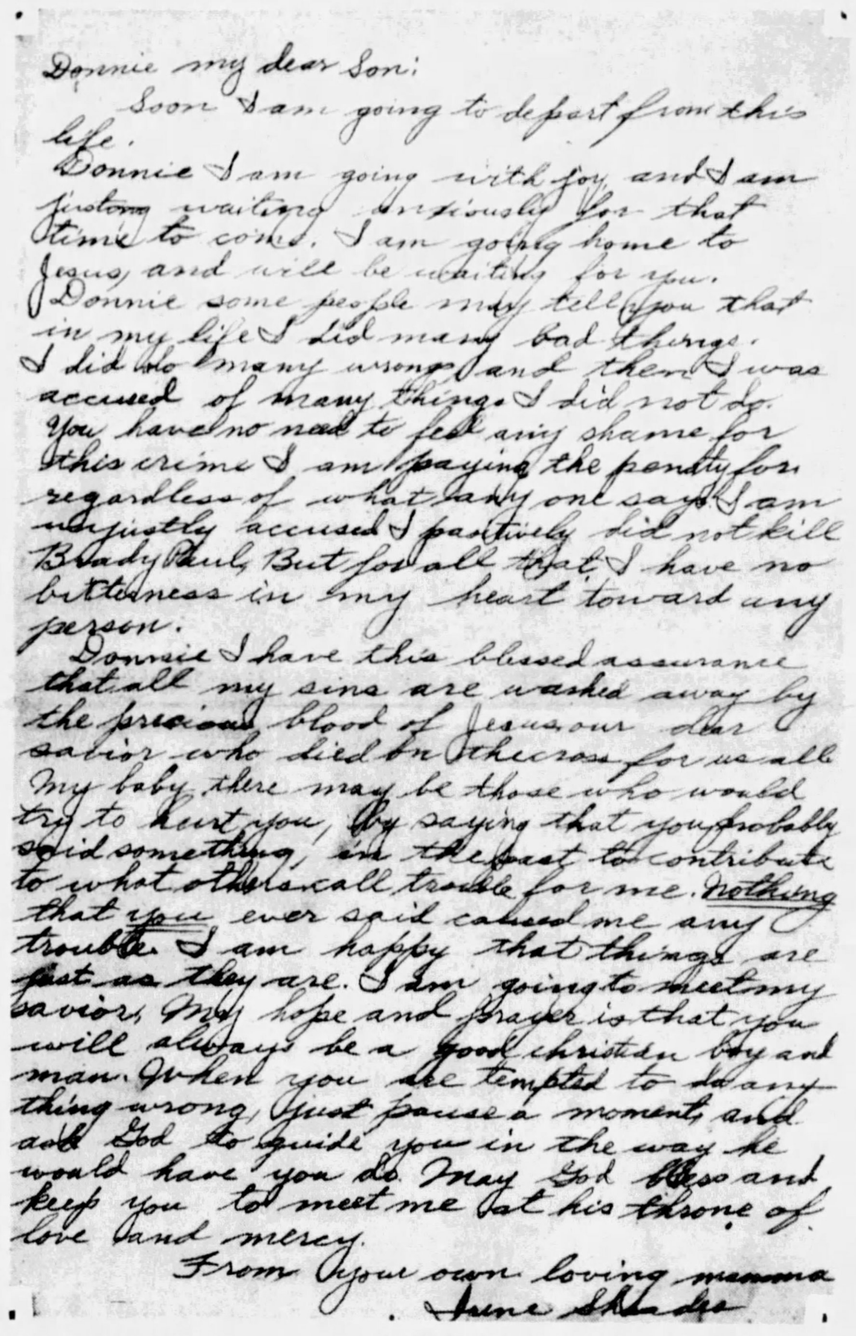
'DONNIE: I DID NOT KILL BRADY PAUL!'

Exclusive! Irene's Letter to Her Son!



Donnie my dear Son:

Soon I am going to depart from this life.

Donnie I am going with joy, and I am just waiting anxiously for that time to come. I am going home to Jesus, and will be waiting for you. Donnie some people may tell you that in my life I did many bad things. I did do many wrongs, and then I was accused of many things I did not do. You have no need to feel any shame for this crime I am paying the penalty for, regardless of what any one says, I am unjustly accused. I positively did not kill Brady Paul. But for all that, I have no bitterness in my heart toward any person.

Donnie I have this blessed assurance that all my sins are washed away by the precious blood of Jesus our dear savior who died on the cross for us all. My baby there may be those who would try to hurt you, by saying that you probably said something in the past to contribute to what others call trouble for me. Nothing that you ever said caused me any trouble. I am happy that things are just as they are. I am going to meet my savior. My hope and prayer is that you will always be a good christian boy and man. When you are tempted to do anything wrong, just pause a moment, and ask God to guide you in the way he would have you do. May God bless and keep you to meet me at his throne of love and mercy.

IRREGULAR METHODS IN BUYING TOLD

Kline, Reporting Secret Quiz, Reveals Dismissal Of Chief February 20

B. L. Succop, director of the City Department of Supplies, has been dismissed by Mayor Charles H. Kline because of irregularities in the conduct of Succop's department.

The Mayor announced the dismissal when before Council this afternoon he made his promised report of his investigation of Succop's department following John D. Houston's charges that bids for foodstuff used by the city were awarded to preferred bidders.

Mayor Kline revealed that the dismissal was effective February 20, as was indicated exclusively by the Sun-Telegraph.

Explaining the dismissal, Mayor Kline said in a letter read to Council:

"On account of the irregularities in the conduct of the affairs of the City Department of Supplies by B. L. Succop, I take this opportunity of informing you that I dismissed Succop on February 20."

Succop was not present when the letter was read. The announcement came after Mayor Kline's report on the canned food controversy had been read to Council.

Councilmen Charles Anderson and Robert Garland criticized the Mayor's report.

KLINE'S REPORT

The mayor's report follows:

"On February 9, 1931, I received the following communication from your honorable body:

"'At a meeting of council, held today, a communication from James W. Houston Company protesting against the award of contracts by the Department of Supplies for certain commodities to other than the lowest bidders, was read and referred to the Mayor and City Controller for investigation.'

"Also enclosing copies of two letters bearing dates of February 5 and February 7 signed by John D. Houston.

"Pursuant to your communication I have the honor to inform you that upon receipt of the same, I immediately got into communication with Dr. James P. Kerr, city controller, and after reading the two letters of complaint we immediately began to investigate the complaints of Mr. Houston, and in addition thereto, the practice of the purchasing department, especially relative to the speci-

STOCKS HIGHEST FOR THIS YEAR

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Stocks again zoomed today on the Stock Exchange, starting the third week since the market turned upward. With only brief periods of hesitancy brought on by profit taking, the entire list forged into higher ground.

New highs for the year were reached by American Can, General Electric and United States Steel. Sharp gains were recorded by many of the specialty issues, with Houston Oil, United States Industrial Alcohol and J. I. Case setting a rapid pace.

The rails were relatively quiet, but the leaders of this group maintained a strong tone.

The utilities were active during most of the day with Standard Gas, American and Foreign Power and American Water Works in heavy demand.

Each day of the rising market appears to have tapped new buying sources to give support to the movement which most brokers 10 days ago declared could not last.

The rise was checked by heavy profit taking in the last hour and leading issues reacted slightly from their highs.

Daugherty's Mother Dies, Trial Halts

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Mrs. Jane Daugherty, widowed mother of former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty and Mal S. Indications were that the trial of Mal would be continued until after his mother's funeral.

Choice of School Board By Election Opposed

Civic and educational leaders today voiced opposition to the plan of Representative James P. Rooney, of the North Side, for an elective school board. Rooney's plan, submitted in Harrisburg, calls for the election of members of the Pittsburgh Board of Public Education next November.

A salary of $5,000 per year is provided. Members would be elected for six years, electing two or three members every other year. Present members of the board are appointed by the court and get no salary.

David B. Oliver, veteran steel man and father of the present system of the Pittsburgh Board of Education, said:

"Don't change. Let well enough alone."

Councilman Clifford B. Connelley, former board member, said:

"I believe the members of the school board are worthy of their hire. I don't want to say anything about elections."

Dr. Anthony N. Goldberger, acting dean of the school of education, University of Pittsburgh, said:

"The fortunate experience of the Pittsburgh school board has proved that an excellent board can be obtained by appointment and without salaries. I don't believe the members should be paid or elected."

King Dares Guns of Foes For Love of Actress

VIENNA, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—King Zog, of Albania, announced here he had decided to remain in Vienna despite the attempt to assasinate him last week. Gossips were attributing his decision to a desire to stay near the pretty Viennese actress Franziska Janko, whose name was linked with the Balkan monarch by the newspaper Wiener Stunde.

The newspaper says the King's attentions to Miss Janko almost led him into the hands of his enemies a few days ago when he missed by a few minutes those who were lying in wait for him in Votive Park after Zog left her company.

Zog is reported to have lavished expensive gifts on the actress, who is the daughter of a gardner whose sister is married to a locomotive fireman. He met her here five years ago while she was a music hall star.

The Albanian ruler escaped unhurt last Friday night when two political enemies opened fire on him as he was leaving the opera.

HOOVER VETO TO KILL SHOALS BILL, BUT NOT BONUS

DETERMINED BACKING FOR VET LOANS

Congress Submissive on Loss Of Power Compromise, Militant on Soldier Fund

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—President Hoover faced a 50-50 decision in the latest revival of the "veto sweepstakes" today, with Congress ready to sustain a veto of the new Muscle Shoals bill, but determined to enact the soldiers' bonus loan bill over his opposition.

Maneuvering of administration leaders when the Senate accepted the Muscle Shoals compromise plainly indicated they expected a veto of the bill. It was said they forced a second vote, after a brief attack on the bill, solely to prepare the way for a veto.

The President undoubtedly will win when he rejects the compromise which temporarily settled a 10-year legislative battle over the government's $100,000,000 power project on the Tenessee river. His advisers have told him the House will sustain a veto, while the Senate vote on the compromise likewise indicated that body would stand by the President.

MAY BEAT BONUS VETO

The House vote on adopting the compromise was 216 to 153, while the Senate vote was 53 to 28. In neither case did the bill's advocates obtain the two-thirds majority, which will be necessary to override a veto.

It will be a different story on the bonus loan bill. That measure passed the house 363 to 39 and the Senate by 72 to 12. Both branches will roll up a tremendous majority for the bill, even over a veto, and even administration leaders concede its enactment over the President's disapproval.

When these issues are settled—at least for the present session—the legislative program of Congress will be about completed. Many minor bills will be enacted, but few measures of national importance will get a hearing in the closing days.

ANTI-LAME DUCK BILL

A number of measures, enacted by the Senate in the last year, may get House approval before adjournment. These include such bills as the $30,000,000 appropriation for modernizing three battleships, and possibly the Norris "lame duck" resolution. All have passed the Senate so it will require only House approval to enact them.

Congressional Progressives, who have fought for years to pass the Norris resolution to abolish "lame duck" sessions of Congress, scented victory as the House approached a vote.

The proposed constitutional amendment, which would prevent members of Congress from holding a Federal job for an entire session after having been rejected at the polls, was to be called up by the House Rules Committee. Representative Gifford (Rep.), of Massachusetts, chairman of the committee handling the bill, declared the measure would pass with amendments.

The resolution proposes also that Presidents shall be inaugurated on January 24 instead of March 4. Congress would convene on January 4 each year, instead of the first Monday in December. Administration leaders insist the second session arbitrarily end on May 4.

fications for supplies and the mode of procedure in regard to the purchase of the same.

"We obtained a great deal of valuable information relative to the purchasing of supplies from practically every wholesale establishment in the city of Pittsburgh, who came to the conference at my suggestion, with the exception of a representative of the James W. Houston Company, who heard the letters read, and their advice and good business judgment was sought, and none of whom had any complaints whatever as to prices paid or non-obtaining contracts at any time. They were pleased to learn how the canned goods were selected, as explained by the superintendent of Mayview, where the cutting was done, and approved of the same, to-wit:

"In the presence of a representative of the Department of Supplies, Department of Welfare, the Controller's office, the superintendent of Mayview, a cook and a dietitian at Mayview, the cans all being covered so that no labels could be seen, and numbered by the warehouse man, were examined, and after careful examination of the samples by all, they were first selected as to quality and quantity in each can, and after considering the quality and quantity and quotation, the award was made.

CRITICIZES HOUSTON

"Mr. Houston also complained that the bidders do not receive notice of the awards for a period of 15 or 20 days after the bids are filed. Even though this statement be true, evidently the gentleman is ignorant of the duties of this office. When one thinks of the many thousands of dollars' worth of supplies that are purchased, varying in ature, from a steel casting to a paper of pins, and requisitions numbering into the hundreds from every activity in the city's life, any many articles to be purchased unknown to the department; where are thousands of letters are sent out annually for inquiries relative to the same and monthly inquiries as to the prices of different commodities, and also with the small clerical force, one can well understand in the absence of bias why there might be some delay of notification to the successful bidders.

"In objecting to the quality of food given to the poor and unfortunates who are committed to Mayview, Mr. Houston has evidently forgotten that practically all of the unfortunates of this institution are weak physically, many confined behind closed doors, hundreds in the hospital, which is always overcrowded, many of whim will never leave the same and require special care.

"Who of us in this great community, in good health, would say, 'You did not pay, you are a charge to the community, and anything is not good enough for you.'"

NOT BARBARIC AGE

"Thank God, we do not live in a barbaric age, and may I say, it it the aim of this city in every way to alleviate the conditions of these unfortunates and administer to their need as long as they are reasonable.

"After an investigation of the charges in the letter we make the following findings:

"We find that the nourishing qualities of the pink and the red salmon are the same, although the red is higher in price, but the amount purchased is so infinitesimal, and only used on 'fish day' when the supply of fish is inadequate, which rarely occurs.

"We recommend that in the purchase of salmon the red salmon be discontinued and pink only be purchased.

"We find that during the year 1930 there was not a call for any canned goods samples from the different bidders in this community and the reason given therefore was that there was a falling market and it is not good business to buy goods in a falling market. But, even though it may not be good business to buy in a falling market, likewise it was not good business to have no bidding for 1930, so that the quality and quantity of food contained in the cans could be ascertained.

"We find that the Department of Supplies is still adhering to the old customs relative to inquiries for prices on contracts and form of specifications which, to our mind, are antiquated and should have been remedied many years ago.

MORE COMPETITION

"We find that a new system should be inaugurated in order to invite greater and fairer competition.

"That there should be a standardization of specifications for the purchase of all supplies for the city, so that all bidders may be intelligently informed of the article desired.

"We find that poor business judgment has been exercised by the director of the Department of Supplies in not correcting many defects in the mode of purchasing of supplies and the running of his office and that many visible irregularities have been permitted to continue.

"Respectfully submitted,
"CHARLES H. KLINE, Mayor.
"JAMES P. KERR, Controller."

Three warnings regarding irregularities in the Department of Supplies went to Mayor Kline in 1929, and were disregarded, according to Attorney Henry Oliver Evans, city controller at that time.

Evans' first complaint was made to the Mayor personally and dealt directly with Director Succop's methods in conducting his department, Evans declared. He said:

"I told Mayor Kline he should investigate conditions in the Department of Supplies and remove Succop or reprimand him. That was not later than March, 1929."

PAIR DISAGREED

This action on the part of Controller Evans followed a disagreement with Succop, who insisted that a new system of accounting introduced in the controller's office by Evans was not practical.

The system made it impossible for department heads to purchase anything without the controller's approval, and provided immediate payment of the city's bills. It also required bids in the purchase of all supplies, the department having been lax in that respect, according to Evans.

Succop objected strenuously to introduction of the system, Evans said. Succop's principal objection was that the repair work of the municipal garage would be held up by waiting for bids on spare parts.

SUGGESTS FUND

Evans replied that the system was in use successfully in many large cities and would work in Pittsburgh. He suggested garage emergencies be taken care of with a revolving fund set up for the purpose.

When further unwillingness to co-operate developed, Evans took the case to Mayor Kline, but nothing came of it. Later, Evans declares, after other irregularities, such as contract awards to high bidders, were noticed, he again advised the Mayor through a friend to investigate, but there was no action.

The third warning, Evans says, went to Kline by letter in July, 1929, following Succop's approval of a contract for hose for the city golf course to the Republic Rubber Company. The J. & H. Phillips Company was low on the bid, Evans said, and he refused to approve the contract of the higher bidder.

INSPECTORS OVERBURDENED

The reforming of specifications for the city's goods is not enough to clear up the present condition, Evans declares. The city buys to the extent of $2,500,000 a year. To check on this vast amount of goods, there are two inspectors in the controller's office. He points out that it is a physical impossibility for two men to cover the field.

A corps of experts working part time might handle the purchases, he believes. These part-time inspectors in various lines would not reveal their identity except in dropping in at odd times to test goods.

Wales Shows Chileans New Dance, 'Waltz-Tango'

VINA DEL MAR, Chile, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—The "waltz-tango" is the Prince of Wales' contribution to the terpsichorean art.

He and his brother, Prince George, came here with a reputed fondness for the South American tango, but when tango music was played at a casino dance last night the Prince of Wales did not once do the straight tango. He worked in waltz steps which made his dancing the most unusual and newest on the floor.

Both princes had a pleasant time dancing and drinking with old friends in the crowded new cabaret. The elder brother danced most with Senora Teresa Ariara De Davis, wife of the British tobacco representative here, while George was attentive to Miss Anne Chilton, daughter of the British ambassador.

They were so interested in the dancing that they declined to go into the roulette room. British royalty does not gamble publicly.

They remained at the casino until 3:45 a. m. when they left for another party elsewhere.

ROBBER KILLS MERCHANT IN STORE

Vainly struggling with an armed thief who waited for him near the entrance of his fruit store and forced him to open his safe, Silvio Lucarelli, 45, of 2612 Brownsville road, Carrick, was shot to death today.

Mrs. Lucarelli found her husband's body beside the open safe, which had been ransacked. A revolver was lying near him beside papers from the strong box in the kitchen in the rear of the store.

Loaves of bread, Lucarelli's hat and lunch box were found in the storeroom—mute evidence of his resistance of the thief's efforts to force him into the rear room.

STRUGGLE INDICATED

Louis, 20, and William Lucarelli, 17, who took charge of the store for their father, said that about $300 was taken. Nothing else was missing, it was said.

Homicide detectives said Lucarelli probably grappled with the thief after opening the safe. He was shot once, a bullet piercing his heart. His clothing showed marks of powder burns, indicative, detectives said, of an attempt to grab the revolver.

The wife told police she had not heard shots fired. The sons and Mrs. Lucarelli's brother, Guido Criddi, asleep in bedrooms in the extreme rear of the place, denied hearing shooting.

Ordinarily he quit work between 5 and 6 a. m., and was taken home by Joseph J. Lewis, of 2726 Pyramid avenue, Brentwood, night superintendent of the Hussey company, the latter informed police.

Today, however, Lucarelli left the mill about 1:30 a. m., saying he was ill and wanted to go home.

Another theory of police is that Lucarelli may have been lured by members of the Blackhand, compelled at the point of a gun to open his store and the safe, and then shot.

Mr. Lucarelli

Dr. M. J. Barchfield, of 2606 Brownsville road, Carrick, told Coroner W. J. McGregor, who visited the store to investigate circumstances of the killing, that between 6 a. m. and 6:05 a. m., he and his wife heard two shots while they were at breakfast. Later they heard a machine pull away from the curb, he said.

Deputy coroners examining the kitchen on orders of Dr. McGregor, found a bullet lodged in a wall, accounting for the second shot Mrs. Lucarelli and Dr. Barchfield said they heard.

Missionary Circle To Hold Supper

The Dorothy Miller Missionary Society of the Forest Avenue United Presbyterian Church will hold a pot luck supper at 6 o'clock tonight in the church rooms.

MARION DAVIES

BEAUTY EXPERT PICKS SIX STARS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Cecil Beaton, London painter, has become known to his friends as the bravest man in Hollywood.

Beaton chose six film girls who, he said, were the most beautiful in motion pictures. He then went into seclusion in his hotel room.

Marlene Dietrich: Because Michelangelo alone could duplicate her.

Norma Shearer: Because she is a lovely, simple, country woman whom sophistication has not spoiled.

Lilyan Tashman: Because she is a Grecian godess, deserving full marks for her nose and hips; she has one of the most divine forms in the world.

Marion Davies: Because she is the vitally alive type of young American girl.

Ina Claire: Because she is in reality a Marie Laurencin painting. She is a gorgeous almond, typifying the acme of gayety, laughter and youth.

HIGHEST COURT SUSTAINS DRY LAW

Chief Justice Hughes took no part in the case because he signed a brief during consideration of the amendment in 1920, upholding its validity.

The lengthy opinion maintained:

"The Constitution was written to be understood by the voters; its words and phrases were used in their normal and ordinary as distinguished from technical meaning; where the intention is clear there is no room for construction and no excuse for interpolation or addition.

"If the framers of the instrument had any thought that amendments differing in purpose should be ratified in different ways, nothing would have been simpler than so to phrase Article V as to exclude implication or speculation. The fact that an instrument drawn with such meticulous care and by men who so well understood how to make language fit their thought does not contain such limiting phrase affecting the exercise of discretion by the Congress in choosing one or the other alternative mode of ratification is persuasive evidence that no qualification was intended.

UP TO CONGRESS

"This court has repeatedly and consistently declared that the choice of mode rests solely in the discretion of Congress. Appellees urge that what was said on the subject in the first three cases cited is dictum. And they argue that although in the last-mentioned it was said the 'amendment by lawful proposal and ratification, has become part of the constitution' the proposition they now present was not before the court.

"While the language used in the earlier cases was not in the strict sense necessary to a decision, it is evident that Article V was carefully examined and that the court's statements with respect to the power of Congress in proposing the mode of ratification were not idly or lightly made. In the national prohibition cases, as shown by the briefs, the contentions now argued were made—the only difference between the presentation there and here being one of form rather than of substance.

"The Tenth Amendment provides:

"'The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively or to the people.'

CONTENTION DISPUTED

"Appellees assert this language demonstrates that the people reserved to themselves powers over their own personal liberty and that the legislatures are not competent to enlarge the powers of the federal government in that behalf. They deduce from this that the people never delegated to the Congress the unrestricted power of choosing the mode of ratification of a proposed amendment. But the argument is a complete non sequitur. The Fifth article does not purport to delegate any governmental power to the United States nor to withhold any from it."

"On the contrary as pointed out in Hawke vs. Smith (No. 1) supra, that article is a grant of authority by the people to Congress and not to the United States.

"The United States relies upon the fact that every amendment has been adopted by the method pursued in respect of the Eighteenth.

"Appellees reply that all these save the Eighteenth dealt solely with governmental means and machinery rather than with the rights of the individual citizen. But we think that several amendments touch rights of the citizens, notably the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Nineteenth, and in view of this, weight is to be given to the fact that these were adopted by the method now attacked.

"For these reasons we reiterate what was said in the national prohibition cases, that the 'amendment by lawful proposal and ratification, has become a part of the Constitution.'

EDUCATORS GIRD FOR DRY FIGHT

DETROIT, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Preparations for an extended fight on the prohibition issue were made today by delegates attending the annual convention of the department of superintendence of the National Educational Association.

Active opposition to the anti-prohibition resolution of Dr. Daniel S. Kealey, a vice president of the organization, came from a group of delegates from his own state of New Jersey, as well as from H. P. Shepherd, of Knoxville, Tenn., chairman and other members of the resolutions committee, to which Dr. Kealey presented his resolution last night.

Dr. Kealey declared:

"In the interests of the school pupils of America, I believe this group of 15,000 educators should go on record as opposed to the dry law."

POLICE RADIO BIDS OPENED

Bids for the city's police broadcasting station at Mt. Washington, 29 radios and 29 automobiles were opened today by Mayor Kline and Public Safety Director James M. Clark.

For the station and the radio sets these three bids were received: Lee DeForrest Company, $13,424; Graybar Electric Company, $14,424.50; Radio Corporation of America, $19,952.22.

Director Clark announced that the award on these bids would be made at 11 a. m. Friday.

Mayor Kline opened the bids for the autos, which will be equipped with radios. There were 17 bids from Pittsburgh motor companies—the highest, $1,232.50 per car; the lowest, $655.50.

Rankin Sets Mark For Outside Loops

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Tex Rankin, Portland, Ore., aviator, claimed a new world's record for outside loops after completing 78 consecutive loops in 88 minutes.

Rankin said he would have continued looping but was confused by dark goggles he was wearing and thought it was darker than it was.

State Takes Over Two Banks in Ohio

Union League Club's Bar Anticipates Dry Repeal

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—The New York Times today said the Union League Club had made provision for a bar in its new clubhouse, with the expectation that the prohibition law soon would be repealed.

The membership is composed largely of Republicans high in political and social life.

George W. Fraker, a member of the house committee, was quoted as follows:

"We hope and expect to see prohibition end very soon. More than three-fourths of the Union League Club are active wets, and prohibition cannot die any too soon for us."

More than 4,000 persons visited the clubhouse at its opening yesterday. Departures from the club's traditions include a dining room and smoking room exclusively for women, and gymnastic equipment featuring mechanical horses.

Universal Service.

The jury was composed of Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war; Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Booth Tarkington, Otto Kahn and Bruce Barton.

The 12 were chosen from a final panel of 26 eminent women, narrowed down from 2,786 popular nominations submitted by readers of Good Housekeeping in the course of a national survey conducted by the magazine over a period of four months.

WOMEN SELECTED

The 12 women are:

Grace Abbott—Chief of the Federal Children's Bureau; leader in campaigns for child labor laws, children's clinics and community nurseries.

Jane Addams—Creator of Hull House in Chicago, nationally known for her practical humanitarianism; founder and president, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom with branches in 21 countries.

NOVELIST PICKED

Willa Cather—Novelist, noted author of "My Antonia," "One of Ours," "A Lost Lady," "Death Comes to the Archbishop;" former newspaperwoman and magazine editor.

Carrie Chapman Catt—Women's suffrage leader; director, national committee on the causes and cures of wars.

Grace Coolidge—Wife of the former President, responsible for Grace Coolidge million dollar endowment for school for deaf mute children; writer of poetry.

Minnie Maddern Fiske—Celebrated actress.

Helen Keller—Deaf and blind from infancy, but developed means of communication which brought the world to her fingertips; lectured widely and furthered education for the blind.

Florence Rena Sabin—Called by Dr. Simon Flexner "the most eminent living woman scientist;" only woman elected to National Academy of Science.

Mary E. Woolley—President, Mt. Holyoke College for 30 years; noted for progressive views on education.

THOMPSON'S SUPPORTERS CONFIDENT

By W. F. PETERSON
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24. — It was all quiet on the ballot box front today as the advance guard of approximately half a million voters recorded their choices for Chicago's World Fair mayor.

Only minor irregularities were reported to the election board, which had an army of 70,000 judges and clerks to watch for fraud. The special police details assigned to wards notorious for election-day rioting had no occasion to assert their authority.

Despite a brilliant sun and mild temperatures, the early voting was not heavy. Some officials predicted a record primary vote, however, with estimates running as high as 800,000.

CANDIDATES TALK

The principal contenders for the Republican mayoral nomination, who waged one of the hottest campaigns in local political history, handed out these statements of confidence:

Mayor William Hale Thompson:

"I will win by a plurality of more than 150,000 over my nearest rival. I am certain to carry 39 of the 50 wards."

Judge John H. Lyle:

"I will best Thompson by more than 150,000 votes. The fight is between us."

Alderman Arthur F. Albert:

"There has been a swing in sentiment toward my candidacy. I am confident I will be nominated."

Thompson was ruled a favorite.

BITTER CAMPAIGN

Today's primary ended a campaign of verbal bomb slinging which is said to outrank all others in bitterness and forcefulness of invective.

Gangsters have played a prominent part in the candidates' speeches, as has the city's impoverishment, prohibition, party regularity and high taxes. Even King George of England was dragged into it, but his royal character was speedily overshadowed by the Scarface Alphonse Capone issue.

It was generally conceded that Anton J. Cermak, leader of Cook County Democracy and president of the County Board of Supervisors, would win the Democratic mayoralty nomination.

HAWKS LEADING U. S. AVIATOR

BOSTON, Feb. 24.—(INS.)—Capt. Frank M. Hawks, who sped over the 440 miles from Washington to Boston in two hours, at an average speed of 189 miles an hour, today received word from Paris of his selection as "America's outstanding aviator for 1930" by the Ligue Internationale des Aviateurs.

Maj. Dieudonne Coste received the ace of all aces award.

The award and trophy to Hawks was based on his American transcontinental speed records and subsequent flights, and that of Coste presumably on his trans-Atlantic nonstop flight.

Amy Johnson, London girl, noted for her flight to Australia, was selected as the outstanding aviatrix. Mrs. Victor Bruce, who recently completed a round-the-world flight, was ranked second, and Maryse Bastie, of France, who set a women's endurance record, third.

Murder Jury May See Fatal Bridge Game Replayed in Court

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 24.—(INS.)—Although both state and defense have indicated they will minimize reference to the bridge game angle of the John G. Bennett slaying, for which his widow, Mrs. Myrtle Bennett, is on trial, John V. Hill, assistant prosecutor, said today there is a possibility that the hands held by the participants at the fatal game would be reconstructed for the benefit of the jury.

Hill said that if it is necessary a bridge table and a deck of cards will be set up in the courtroom, and with the aid of Mrs. Bennett and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoffman, guests of the Bennett's when the slaying occurred, an attempt will be made to replay the hand that precipitated Bennett's death.

According to the Hoffmans, Bennett dealt and opened the bidding with one spade. Hoffman raised the bid to two diamonds. Then came the crux of the situation—Mrs. Bennett raised her husband's original bid of one spade to four spades. Mrs. Hoffman passed. Bennet went set one trick.

Hoffman quoted Mrs. Bennett as saying to her husband:

"You're a bum bridge player."

Angered, Bennett reached across the table and slapped his wife's face several times. Then Mrs. Bennett shouted:

"Only a cur would strike his wife in front of guests!"

The slaying followed.

Following the shooting neither Mrs. Bennett nor the Hoffman's could recall what cards they held. Hoffman, however, did recall that Mrs. Bennett held a "good hand."

Whether Mrs. Bennett's hand was "good" enough to justify a raise to four spades never has been submitted to expert opinion.

IRENE'S MORGUE DOORS BROKEN

cuted with Irene, rests in a locked vault of a funeral home near the Elm Grove business section. Irene's body will be shipped from Bellefonte this afternoon.

The vault holding Dague will remain locked in the Crider Brothers' Funeral Home until 2 o'clock tomorrow, when funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. H. C. Teagarden. Burial will be in the country graveyard of the little village of Dallas, 12 miles from Elm Grove, a Wheeling suburb.

Relatives will be allowed to see Dague's body and police will guard the services to protect the funeral party from the curious.

Tonight the body of Irene was expected to arrive. Members of the family refused to speak about funeral arrangements which had been announced as planned for tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock from the Cooey Bentz Funeral Home in South Wheeling. Burial will follow in the family burial plot at Bellaire, O.

The public will be barred from both services.

Only a few persons were attracted to the funeral home when Dague's body arrived late last night. Therein were gathered the widow, a brother, Niles Dague, and an uncle, Walter Dague.

Reports that Mrs. Dague had collapsed yesterday were denied.

GIRL KILLED IN STRIKE RIOT

International News Service.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Feb. 24.—A young woman was shot and killed, another girl was wounded seriously and a man was wounded and arrested as a material witness early today when rioting broke out among striking employes of the Mammoth Hosiery mill here.

Alberta Bachman, 20, died from a bullet wound at 2:35 a. m. Her sister, Elsie, 25, is in Rosenkrans Hospital suffering from gunshot wounds and Russell Hastie, 25, shot in the hip, was placed in the custody of Sheriff Clarence M. Werkheiser as a material witness.

The dead and injured strikers all lived in Stroudsburg or nearby.

The shooting took place near the home of Clark Miller, an employe of the hosiery mill, who had walked out when the strike was first called. Later, however, he returned to work.

He told County Detective Calvin Gorgy, who had joined state police and Sheriff Werkheiser in probing the affair, that some one threw a stone through the window of his home here early in the evening.

Miller and Russell Arnold, another employe of the mill who refused to join the strike, saw several persons fleeing toward an automobile. Instead of obeying Miller's order to stop, the persons jumped into the car, which started away as Miller and Arnold fired.

BULL TO SETTLE BIG SUIT

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—(INS.)—A cash settlement in a $250,000 damage suit against W. Perkins Bull, K. C., wealthy British landowner, will be made today for an amount greater than the damages sought in the suit, Jay Frederic Reeve, attorney for Dr. Johns Streeter Sidley, announced.

Dr. Sidley, who was divorced Saturday from Mrs. Maybelle Horlick Sidley, brought the damage suit against Bull, alleging that he had been trailed and harassed by private detectives for three years. Mrs. Sidley is heiress to the Horlick millions.

The King's councillor, seriously injured in a mysterious automobile accident, is in a Toronto hospital at present.

Police Continue Quiz Into Thefts

Kenneth McKillop, 19, of 1200 Franklin street, Wilkinsburg, today was held for further investigation in connection with petty thefts from homes in the Squirrel Hill district. Investigation shows, police say, that none of the loot of the thefts they are investigating was taken to the McKillop home. The boy's parents, they say, knew nothing of these robberies.

SIGHT, SOUND BILLS ON AIR

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Estimating there are 10,000 sight-receiving instruments in the nation, the De Forest Radio Company announces the broadcasting of a daily television program over Station W2XCD at Passaic, N. J.

The program is being sent out three times daily, with a 90-minute period beginning at 9 p. m. (EST.) The latter consists of 30 minutes of "direct pickup subjects" and 60 minutes of moving picture films. The visual portion is transmitted on 2,050 kilocycles and the sound accompaniment on a wave length of 187 meters, over Station W2XCR.

Original features planned for this week include the De Forest Little Symphony Orchestra, a mandolin concert, a boxing match, piano music and a studio party.

Former Grand Duke Of Oldenburg Dead

OLDENBURG, Germany, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—The former Grand Duke Friedrich August, of Oldenburg, died today at the age of 78. He abdicated November 11, 1918, when a body of revolutionary sailors from Wilhelmshaven told him the time for royalty in Germany had passed.

NAMESAKE CITY HONORS MELBA

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 24.—(INS.)—Melbourne, the city from whose name she carved her own to carry it to the heights of fame, today will do final honors to Dame Nellie Melba.

The body of the singer, who died here yesterday after a prolonged illness, will be taken to Melbourne today. Burial will be at Lillydale, Victoria, on Thursday.

While all Australia mourned the passing of the singer, Europe and America sent hundreds of messages of condolence to relatives here.

The diva, whose real name was Nellie Porter Mitchell, was born not far from Melbourne and fashioned her last name from the nearby city.

Elliott to Execute 2 More This Week

OSSINING, N. Y., Feb. 24. —(AP.)—This is one of the busiest weeks in Robert Elliott's career as official executioner for four states.

Yesterday he threw the switch that killed Irene Shrader and Glenn Dague in the penitentiary near Bellefonte, Pa. Thursday he has two other executions on his schedule at Sing Sing Prison. Elliott will get $600 for the four executions.

In 1927 Elliott executed three men in Massachusetts and three at Sing Sing with a 24-hour period.

Crash Hurls Cyclist 74 Feet to Death

LONG BEACH, Cal., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Herbert W. Lindaner, 20, met death in a spectacular accident last night. Riding a borrowed motorcycle, Lindaner apparently opened the throttle wide while intending to close it. He was hurled 74 feet over a one-story building when the machine crossed a dome-shaped rise in a parking station.

Coolidge Hits Lavish Governmental Spending

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 24.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

One of the most astounding spectacles is the complacency with which people permit themselves to be plundered by extravagant governmental expenditure under the pretense of taxing the rich to help the poor. The poor are not helped but hurt. Taxes have to be collected by the rich before they are paid. They are collected from all people. A higher tax means real wages are lower. The cost of living is higher. The chance to work is less. Every home is burdened. Its value is decreased. The quality of the food, clothing and shelter of the children is reduced.

Calvin Coolidge

The Congress and the legislatures know these results of extravagance. The people may not fully realize them but they suffer from them. Legislators do not want to be extravagant. Minorities drive them to it. The people who pay and suffer give little vocal support to economy. They make no threat of political retaliation against those who are taking their money, increasing their cost of living, removing their chance to work. Those who demand appropriations inspire all the fear. Aggregate state and town debt, national and local taxes are increasing enormously. Unless the people resist vigorously and immediately they will be overwhelmed.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

mitted he was against Pinchot and asserted that the Governor's stand against utilities had not and would not accomplish anything.

He denied that the Pennsylvania Railroad, so far as he knew, had put campaign funds in Altoona and Reed's shops, but admitted that Anderson knew what to do.

It was brought out that Anderson for six months with him was lobbyist at Harrisburg.

Counsel for the Governor tried to get the Pennsylvania Railroad president to admit that while William S. Vare was promoting him politically, Vare's construction company had contracts with the railroad.

Gray asked Atterbury whether he couldn't support Pinchot for the reason that if he were elected the Pennsylvania Railroad would be unable to get favors from the Public Service Commission or to do other things which it desired.

The General replied that the Pennsylvania Railroad had no favors to ask and does not do things that are liable to be interfered with.

The crowded Senate caucus room was filled with laughter during questioning about the management of the Brown-Davis campaign. Atterbury said he did not know who managed it and "apparently it was not managed."

Gen. Atterbury denied that he or any other officials of the company used any coercion on their employes or business men of towns where their shops were located in an effort to defeat Gov. Pinchot.

INTERESTED IN POLITICS

Admitting that he interested himself in politics, the railroad head, when the questioning began, denied that he knew James S. Haziett, of Philadelphia, was connected with the Vares.

Gray cross-examined him concerning a secret meeting of political leaders in Philadelphia at which the railroad leader insisted there was nothing irregular.

Repeated questioning by Gray failed to shake from the General specific reasons why Public Service Commissioner James S. Benn, Mayor Harry A. Mackey and other political figures attended the meeting.

Atterbury presented a statement, which he presented to Philadelphia's counsel, following the Sunday morning secret meeting in his office. It pointed out that subway and city project plans were discussed. Atterbury was asked:

"Why was Benn needed? Why did you send for him?"

He replied:

"For what advice he might give."

"Were the discussions to be of interest to the Public Service Commission?"

"They might have been."

QUESTIONS ON CONTRACTS

The questioning then veered to cost-plus contracts. Atterbury asked Gray what he meant and then answered that often times awarding such contracts was necessary.

Atterbury said he didn't know if the Vare Construction Company electrified the Wilmington branch. He denied knowing anything about awarding hauling or other contracts.

Asked if politicians who sought contracts were favored, Atterbury said:

"Not unless city or state benefitted."

He denied knowing of the Vare company, but admitted that he had representatives contacting with legislature.

Gray asked:

"Did you interest yourself in election of Senator Daix as president pro tempore?"

"I did not give instructions, but I may have expressed the hope that Mr. Daix would be elected."

Atterbury said he was not aware that any senators were employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The questioning centered on whether certain hired employes got salaries but did not work. Atterbury said he was not aware of anyone.

The questioning then went on:

"General, are you actively in politics?"

"I shouldn't say."

"You were national committeeman?"

"Yes."

"Through Mr. Vare?"

"No. Mr. Vare at that time had names before the Senate. Mr. Grundy wanted to be a committeeman."

"How about Senator Reed?"

"Maybe he did."

"Did you know the place was promised to Reed and Mr. Vare brought you forward?"

"No."

"This was not done by Mr. Vare as payment for a favor?"

"No."

"Have you resigned as committeeman?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

AGAINST PINCHOT

"Because I couldn't support all candidates."

"The one candidate was for governor?"

"Yes."

"Was it because, when as governor, the Pennsylvania Railroad couldn't get any favors from the Public Service Commission?"

"The Pennsylvania Railroad has not favors to get, my interest in politics is purely personal. My opposition was because he was against all public utilities."

"Do you know who managed the Brown campaign?"

"I didn't know anyone did."

"Don't you know it was Mr. Meyers, one of your former employes?"

"Yes, I suppose he was."

"Did you attend the conferences of the war board and Francis Shunk Brown?"

"Yes, one."

NO PRIVATE FUND

Asked if he was the only one who "contacted" with the Public Service Commission, Atterbury said he hoped all his officials did.

"Do you have a private fund for this purpose?"

"Didn't know there is such a fund—if there was I'd have used it."

"Is there such a fund?"

"There is no such fund."

"None for political purposes?"

"None whatever."

"The largest public utility doesn't have funds to protect its political interest?"

"Not through a fund."

"How then?"

"Through attorneys here."

"Will you inquire as to such a fund and let us know?"

"I will."

Asked if he would return when desired, he answered:

"Any time you want, sorry as I am to have to be here."

Speaker C. Jay Goodnough last night announced the personnel of the House committee to investigate utilities, with the exception of the "three to represent the public."

The latter will be named by Gov. Pinchot possibly later in the week. It was learned that his delay was due to "having more pegs than he had holes."

MOORE APPOINTED

Goodnough named D. Glenn Moore, Washington, Pa., newspaperman who sponsored the investigation resolution. Moore has been an adept floor leader.

Louise Hagmire, burgess of Aspinwall, was the Allegheny County member named. Other appointees were Bait Richards, of New Castle, also a newspaperman; Frank L. Bowers, of Point Marion, Fayette County; Ellwood J. Turner, of Delaware County; Martin Memolo, of Lackawanna, and Chester H. Rhodes, of Monroe County. Rhodes is a Democrat.

Miners Ask Probe Of Coal Operators

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Feb. 24.—(INS.)—Citing a specific alleged instance of unfairness and painting a gloomy picture of conditions in the bituminous coal fields of Central Pennsylvania, union miners today appealed to Gov. Gifford Pinchot to include the coal operators of the region in his probe of the public utilities.

Turtle Creek Survey Proposed in Bill

HARRISBURG, Feb. 24.—A survey of Turtle Creek and its tributaries to study flood control is proposed by a bill of Representative Frank J. Riddle, of Allegheny, which was introduced in the House today. The survey would be made by engineers of the department of forests and waters attached to the water and power resources board.

Musmanno Defies Pastor, Blue Law Bill Critic

In a letter to the Rev. Dr. Robert F. Galbreath, pastor of Bellevue Presbyterian Church, Representative M. A. Musmanno today took exception to alleged remarks in a Sunday address in which the minister was said to have referred to the Musmanno Sunday bill as "un-American."

Quoting the minister as declaring the bill was backed by foreign-born, he called attention to the fact that he was born in Stowe Township, that he and three brothers served in the American Army in France, one being killed and another brother was wounded while with the American Army in Cuba. The letter said in part:

"If you call all opponents to the blue law of 1794 un-American, you then insult all the good people of Allegheny County who, in a referendum last year, voted 5 to 1 to repeal or change that law. Practically every large city in the country, with the exception of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, permits innocent sports and entertainments on Sundays.

"If I thought that my bill would in any way weaken the pillars of religion and morality, I would abandon it in an instant; but the facts indicate that instead of weakening, it would strengthen them, because my bill, if enacted into a law, will make people subservient to the law and not superior to the law, for you cannot question that the law of 1794 is being violated en masse throughout the state every Sunday.

"The question as to whether the law of 1794 shall or shall not be repealed or modified should be decided on matters germane to the issue, not on personalities. If the people are satisfied with the law, then let it remain and let it be inforced in all its original vigor."

COAL POLICE HEARING SET

HARRISBURG, Feb. 24.—A public hearing on the Musmanno bill, which would completely abolish the coal and iron police and substitute property watchman, was ordered for March 10 at 2 p. m.

The granting of the hearing made by the judiciary general committee, of which James H. McClure, representative from Glassport, is chairman, followed a meeting of the group today.

Musmanno, who sponsored the bill, asked that the hearing date be set. He said that he also would bring advocates for the bill before the opening hearing.

Last Sacraments To Cardinal Maffi

PISA, Italy, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—The last sacraments were administered today to Cardinal Maffi, one of the most prominent of the college of cardinals, who is believed dying of influenza.

Washington Name Given Twins Born On His Birthday

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—A boy was born to Mrs. Nicholas Bushman a few minutes before midnight Sunday. George Washington's Birthday anniversary.

He was named George Washington Bushman.

A few minutes after midnight the boy's twin sister was born. She got the name of Martha Washington Bushman.

PINCHOT WORK BILLS OFFERED

HARRISBURG, Feb. 24.—Bills to carry into effect Gov. Pinchot's budget recommendations for an advance building program to aid unemployment have been introduced in the House by Representative Steedle, of Allegheny County. Construction to cost $10,270,300 is provided for in the measures.

PUBLIC HEARING ON JUDGE BILL

HARRISBURG, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—A public hearing will be held on March 3 on the bill of Representative Coyne, Allegheny, to provide two additional places on the Allegheny County Common Pleas bench, Representative Studenmeier, Schuylkill, announced.

The bill passed the House last night on first reading and on second reading today, after which it was recommitted to Committee on Judiciary Special for the hearing.

The request for a public hearing was made on behalf of the Allegheny County bar by Alexander P. Lindsay and Alexander Tener, Pittsburgh attorneys.

Missionary Circle Meets at Avalon

The Women's Missionary Society, of Avalon Presbyterian Church, meets in the Sunday school rooms this afternoon for a entertainment program and sale of baked and canned goods.

Girl Slain With Ax, Mother Ends Life

MONCTON, N. B., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Mrs. Robert Sprague, 45, and her daughter, Edwina, 14, were found dead in the Sprague home. The girl had been killed with an ax, the mother, officials said, self-slain with a butcher knife.

The medical examiner said the mother evidently had done the killing after having become suddenly insane.

Two Go on Trial On Murder Charges

John V. Barnes, of Homestead, was placed on trial today before Visiting Judge Norman T. Boose, for the fatal stabbing of Charles Lewis, 30, of 411 Third avenue, Homestead. Lewis died the next day.

John F. Freeman, of the Hill district, was on trial before Judge James H. Gray for the shooting to death, last October 27, of Curtis Smith, 30, of McKeesport.

The Egg of SUPREME QUALITY

—DONAHOE'S Fifth Avenue Brand

THE egg produced in the most ideal of climatic conditions, by wonder-flocks of snow white hens; hens contented and healthy, housed in the most pleasant surroundings, fed and cared for in the best modern, sanitary and scientific manner.

DONAHOE'S FIFTH AVENUE BRAND EGGS are as different from ordinary eggs as light from darkness—a trial will convince you. To eat them is a perfect delight. You will appreciate the mild fresh flavor—so appetizing, so delicious, so different.

THE reasons why DONAHOE'S FIFTH AVENUE BRAND EGGS are so superior to ordinary eggs are too numerous to mention in this advertisement—but they can well be summed up in these lines:

an egg can be no better than the hen that laid it and the egg flavor no better than the food the hen ate!

JUST compare the poor ordinary barnyard hen, a regular tramp, compelled to dig, scratch and fight for a pitiful bare existence, eating and drinking whatever, wherever and whenever she can—and only she knows what she eats and drinks.

COMPARE this poor hen passing her life in the midst of unsanitary barnyard conditions, running over the same contaminated soil year after year—compare her with the wonder-flocks of snow-white hens, from high bred registered stock, that lay the DONAHOE FIFTH AVENUE BRAND EGGS.

SNOW-WHITE hens that are kept healthy by the uniform feeding of pure, clean grain and the drinking of pure fresh water—snow-white hens that are housed in the most sanitary manner; concrete floors, running water, electric lights, steam, etc.

SNOW-WHITE hens that know the pleasure of running over broad acres of clean yards—the soil kept free from contamination by being regularly sprinkled with lime or gypsum, then turned over and having a crop of green feed grown thereon. Crops grow quickly, they are constantly rotated and thus the soil is kept clean and sweet.

—AND—

DONAHOE'S Fifth Avenue Brand Eggs are INFERTILE—they are produced specially for EATING purposes

TRY these eggs. Soft boil or poach one alongside an ordinary egg and note the wonderful, sweet, delicate flavor of DONAHOE'S FIFTH AVENUE BRAND EGG as compared with the ordinary flavor of the other. You will be surprised and delighted with FIFTH AVENUE EGGS.

Our Navy will hold its next maneuvers in dire straits. A large body of water.

The Old Calamity Choir is sounding off sweet, pretty and melodious since the veterans' loan bonus bill outgrew its shelf.

Andrew Mellon swivels around furiously in his chair and yells it will wreck the country. We thought we had been in the used car department for the last couple of years.

We don't want to pour new water on old drowned mice. But they've been wrecking America since Valley Forge and there's still a couple of gasps left in the reserve tank.

Andy can brew up a witches' broth of statistical herbs and pro rata roots that would knock your hat off the rack. It's his job as Secretary of the Treasury to laugh when it comes in and sob when it goes out.

He is also very smart people. For Einstein, when mail robbers hi-jacked a sixth-class postmaster the other day they discovered that all they had was a lot of torn money.

A lot of paper money has been torn since the boys started grabbing it on the run and in the dark.

And now the vets get only half the original bonus. Which is all right. Some old Peruvian philosopher said the half was bigger than the whole. He was talking about half an alligator and a complete rabbit.

If we can't get invited to the dinner we will wait until they shake the tablecloth out of the window. Possibly Andrew is politically correct when he says the bonus payment is more than the day books can digest.

But the government helped the farmers. Now it's assisting the veterans. They marched away 14 years ago to make the world safe for whatever the committee thought best.

We imagine that the government of the people includes what it's talking about.

The vets' bonus helps the soldiers, who are people who do the voting. It's a round robin that is a cuckoo on its father's side.

If they pay the bonus like they paid that 30 a month in the Army, then the government gets the money back immediately. In fact, it's the egg-in-the-bag trick. There is no egg.

We hope Andrew is wrong about the bonus being too much of a burden. But if it wrecks the works it's too late for the passengers to jump now.

Washington's Warning Recalled by Kin

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—(Universal.)—George Washington's parting counsel to the nation, his farewell address, was invoked last night by his great-great-great-grandnephew, as a warning that the chaotic desire to keep widely clear of foreign entanglements are even more timely now than in 1931.

In a nation-wide radio address over a coast-to-coast hookup of the National Broadcasting Company commemorating the one hundred and thirty-ninth anniversary of the birth of the first President, Thomas Campbell Washington said:

"I am quite certain that if Washington were alive and speaking to you tonight, he would reiterate these words of counsel and advice with greater power and emphasis than he did when he laid down the reins of government in September, 1796.

RECALLS HIS WORDS

"I am constantly told by many of our statesmen of the difficulties they encounter from agents of foreign nations who are forever reminding them of Washington's position on our international relations. My notion of what Washington would reply is taken from his farewell address and is in this language:

"'Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake; since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of a republican government. Real patriots who may resist the intrigues are liable to become suspected and odious; while the tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people to surrender their interest.'"

IMPORTANT PAPER

The speaker, declaring adequate emphasis had never been placed on the farewell address, continued:

"I know of no state paper in all our archives that is of greater service.

"You can call it our code of national morality, our treatise on the etiquet of international relations, the parting warning of a parent to the heirs of his accumulated riches and wisdom—call it what you will.

"I only wish it were George Washington, or at least the spirit of George Washington, speaking to you. I am sure he would reaffirm to you his beliefs in the present-day application of the doctrines and counsel he so patriotically set forth.

"In war and peace he and his companions had established a government, deriving all its just powers from the consent of the people organizing it.

AVOIDS INTERFERENCE

"It thus happens that our nation maintained its peace and self-respect by avoiding interference in the domestic affairs of its neighbors. And our own peace and prosperity will be disturbed only when we allow our neighbors to impose their peculiar and destructive customs upon us.

"There are men and women not only in Soviet Russia but in this country who would destroy our national family solidarity. They have the affront to tell you that if Washington were living he would be a leader of such 'advanced ideas' of 'universal brotherhood.'

"The idea is preposterous. To impute to Washington's sublime ideal of the national family a concept of 'brotherhood' arising from unrestrained and universal lust among disintegrating nations is a vile insult to his memory.

"Washington would no more think of exposing his country to such an infamy than he would the virtues of that Mt. Vernon family which he held sacred in his heart of hearts."

QUOTES PASSAGES

Quoting from the farewell address, he continued:

"'Why forego the advantages of our situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?

"'It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliance with any portion of the foreign world.'"

Concluding, Thomas Washington added:

"If there was ever a time in the history of this country when the philosophy of Washington as set forth in these words provides insurance for us against wars, that time is today. In the spirit of peace and goodwill it is a bond to preserve the health and prosperity of this nation both for ourselves and our children."

A Quick Way to Prepare

Let stand a few minutes.

Drain . . . and they're ready to eat like confections.

Or steam them if you like them extra juicy.

Be sure they're SUNSWEETS. These fancy California Prunes are tender and plump just as they come from the carton. Many people like them that way. Others prefer them just a bit softer, and the cold water or steaming does it.

Remember, there is as much difference in prunes as in any food or fruit you eat.

SOCIETY GIRL DIES IN CRASH

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Harriet Hathaway, 24, was killed and her sister, Helen, 26, and William Leroy Hixon, 34, of Toledo, were injured when their automobile turned over after colliding with two other cars in the Bronx.

The young women were believed to be members of a family socially prominent in Detroit. Avery Wright, 36, of Perrysburg, O., who police said was the driver of the death car, was unhurt. He and Hixon were guests at a Park avenue hotel.

The car which the four occupied collided with that of Max Just, a building contractor, struck a parked automobile and turned over.

Harriet Hathaway, her skull fractured, was dead when the car was righted. Her sister and Hixon, both believed to be suffering from internal injuries and severe lacerations, were taken to a hospital.

PRESBYTERIANS SEEK UNITY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Promotion of church unity held an important place on the program of the western area of the World Alliance of Reformed and Presbyterian Churches convening here today in annual session.

Alliance members from the United States and Canada were in attendance. The meetings will continue through Thursday, under the chairmanship of Dr. J. Addison Jones, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

A "doctrinal basis" for unification of the five main branches of the Presbyterian churches is to be laid before the convention Thursday by the Rev. W. I. Wishart, of Pittsburgh, member of the joint committee representing the five major churches.

WATCH THESE DANGER SIGNALS!

HEADACHES, dizziness, coated tongue, loss of appetite, lack of energy, a general feeling of "blues"—these are the most frequent danger signals of constipation.

Look out for them. Don't let them make your life miserable. Start tomorrow eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—a delicious ready-to-eat cereal. As pleasant as it is healthful. What a relief it will be after taking unnatural, habit-forming pills and drugs.

Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are guaranteed to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In severe cases, eat it three times daily.

Milk or cream brings out the delightful nut-like taste of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. And with milk or cream, important vitamins are furnished. ALL-BRAN is equally tempting with fruits or honey. Sprinkle it over other cereals.

Use it in cooking—for making delicious bran muffins, breads in omelets, etc. ALL-BRAN also has iron, the builder of good, rich, red blood. At all grocers in the famous red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. The original All-Bran.

1931 Super-Heterodyne in Pooley Period Furniture

At the Lowest Prices for Which Sets of This Calibre Have Ever Been Offered in Cabinets of This Kind

$79 $89 $99 $119

Super-heterodyne is recognized as the most selective of all radio circuits—three to five times that of ordinary radio frequency; but its price, heretofore, has restricted its popular exploitation. Pooley has been nationally known for years as one of the better designers of furniture, particularly period types. Here, then, is a combination of radio in its highest form, and real furniture, at prices that would be remarkable for either, alone. Those who have delayed purchasing a New Radio, awaiting the time when Good Radio and Good Design might be jointly available at reasonable cost, must surely agree that this is it.

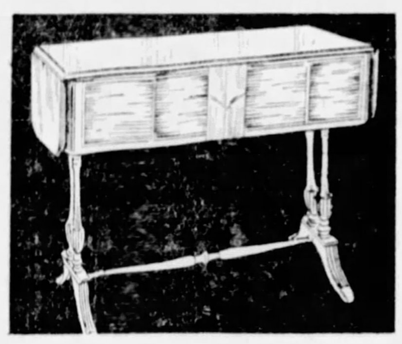
$79

William and Mary Table in walnut veneer. The right drawer panel reveals the super-heterodyne radio.



$89

$99

Queen Anne Desk in walnut or mahogany veneers. Writing bed, pigeon holes, drawers, and a RADIO—instantly available.

A Group Purchase

These values are the result of group action in the present depressed furniture market, and a similarly affected radio industry. A number of leading stores of the country joined in the deal, and together wrote an order of sufficient size to command extraordinary concessions from both furniture and radio sources.

1931 Eight-Tube Sets

The radio is the latest triple screen-grid, eight-tube, super-heterodyne circuit, made under the latest licensed patents, by Silver-Marshall, long specialists in super-heterodyne. They are equipped with Jensen dynamic speaker, push-pull amplification, tone control, power detection, and an extra speaker jack. They have been made since January 1st, and so are 1931 models in fact as well as in name.

Utilitarian Designs

The cabinets take the form of useful secretaries, desks, and tables, with drawer spaces and other conveniences which will commend them to modern homes. Well made, authentic Colonial designs illustrated. There is also a standard type of radio cabinet in the selection.

Convenient Payments

These radios may be purchased on our convenient payment arrangement. All prices include tubes, complete installation, and a year's service without charge.

New Spring "Wear Weaves"

Wear Weave coats are a classic which grows better each season — these new ones prove it, by outrivaling their predecessors in the quality of their tweeds and trimming furs, and in attractiveness.

. . . Of meshy checked tweeds, mixed tweeds, soft and rough tweeds, all of them chosen for the sturdy wear expected of such coats. In tones of gray, tan, grayed blues and refreshing greens, and lined with harmonizing silks which will make a background for sports-type silk frocks to be worn with them.

In women's regular sizes 34 to 44.

To End a Cough In a Hurry, Mix This at Home

To end a stubborn cough quickly, it is important to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes, get rid of the germs and also to aid the system inwardly to help throw off the trouble.

For these purposes, here is a home-made medicine, far better than anything you could buy at 5 times the cost. From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to fill up the pint. This takes but a moment, and makes a remedy so effective that you will never do without, once you have used it. Keeps perfectly, and children like it.

This simple remedy does three necessary things. First, it loosens the germ-laden phlegm. Second, it soothes away the inflammation. Third, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This explains why it brings such quick relief, even in the obstinate bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

AS YOU PASS one high mountain, standing by itself, called Magallanes Peake, Senor Jose Elias, driving the car, asks his brother Francisco, to tell about the big bear. You shall see its skin tomorrow. It was a grizzly, as big as a steer, and annoyed ranchers, killing a cow, or a bull almost every day. It is dead now. Frank Hillman, cattleman living in Nacco, killed it, and has the skin big enough to cover a small bedroom floor. Perhaps he will sell it.

AND CHICO, the Mexican cowboy working for the Elias brothers, had an adventure. He noticed a peculiar looking reddish stone, almost round. It was heavy, and his curiosity was aroused, so he took it home. A storekeeper, to whom he showed it, gave him a revolver and a cow horse worth $30 for it. Then the storekeeper sold it for $800. It was almost pure gold.

THEY BROUGHT big ploughs, and cut up the mountainside all around. Hundreds of prospectors scoured the peak from base to top. No one could find the source of that "ball of gold." You might like to come and try.

Chico, the finder, called ever since "Chico Bola de Oro," or "Chico of the ball of gold," never complained, or looked for the source of his find. He got a good horse, a pretty revolver, and was satisfied.

YOU REACH this Cienaga Ranch, of which you may hear more, and are invited at once to enter a corral, to inspect "close up" 15 magnificent Hereford bulls. They have their sharp horns intact, and you do not quite agree with Senor Jose, pointing to one four-legged mountain of fat and anger, and saying:

"That's a pretty bull."

That bull was bought from the agricultural department of the University of Nebraska, and that one from the University of Arizona. Says Don Jose:

"We call them the professors."

THIS HIGH part of Northern Mexico and Southern Arizona would please you and hunting for the source of that golden ball would be wonderful exercise, expelling from your lungs any residual air brought from Chicago, New York or Boston.

There are as good mines here unfound as ever were floated in Wall Street, and there is a vigor in the air, a beauty in the mountains, and a sense of freedom from the cabined, cribbed and confined parts of the world that would make even a 100 per cent American go-getter, forget about gold for a few moments.

You should see this country now, easier to explore than it was when Ed Schieffelin traveled through here, with his pick and his canteen.

BARDSTOWN, Ky., Feb. 24.—(AP)—Accused of slaying a Louisville and Nashville Railroad executive, who had given them a ride in his automobile, Tony Peterson, 25, and Frank Carsons, 28, both of Chicago, were held in Nelson County Jail today pending investigation.

Cret, Architect, Wins Philadelphia Award

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 24.—(AP)—Paul P. Cret, noted architect, was the recipient of the Philadelphia Award, one of the city's greatest individual civic honors.

The award, a prize of $10,000 and an embossed scroll contained in an ivory casket, was established in 1921 by the late Edward W. Bok, Philadelphia editor. It is given annually to the individual living in this city or vicinity who, in the estimation of the award committee, shall have performed an act or contributed a service calculated to advance the best interests of the community.

SCIENCE ENDS STOMACH PAIN

New Prescription To Banish Acid Stomach, Heartburn, Sourness, Gas and Resulting Nervousness and Sleeplessness

Burning acid stomach pain after eating, belching, gas, bloating, heartburn, dizziness and the resulting nervousness, sleeplessness and colds won't trouble you if you use the new prescription ACIDINE.

Mrs. H. C. Hill of Ogden, Utah, says: "I had trouble for four years with my stomach and had taken bicarbonate of soda and many medicines, but they would give me only momentary relief. I tried the sample of ACIDINE which you mailed me and it was so good that I bought a large can and after using half of it, haven't had a pain in my stomach since. ACIDINE acidity is wonderful."

No other known remedy for acidity surpasses Acidine. Contains an effective starch digestant, Japtase, which liquefies 800 times its own weight of starchy food, under proper conditions. Five other scientific ingredients neutralize burning acid, stop gas, soothe irritated stomach lining. Its instantaneous action in cleaning up the troubles that commonly lead to stomach distress is more pleasing that you would believe possible.

Acidine is safe, harmless and pleasant for adults and children. Used by millions of people. It costs you nothing if it fails, for the Acidine people say to every druggist, "If any customer is displeased with the results obtained from Acidine, give them back their money immediately. We stand behind this product absolutely." Keep Acidine in your home always.

The advice of your physician is: Keep out of doors, in the open air, breathe deeply; take plenty of exercise in the mellow sunshine, and have a periodic check-up on the health of your body.

Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why the "TOASTING" process includes the use of the Ultra Violet Rays. LUCKY STRIKE—made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED"—an extra, secret heating process. Harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos are expelled by "TOASTING." You will enjoy Swift & Company's 1931 Year Book

• • • • • • • • because the story of Swift & Company's activities for the year 1930 is of absorbing interest to every man and woman.

It tells how a solidly organized concern, dealing mainly in perishable foodstuffs, was able to come through a year of general depression, and earn dividends for its shareholders.

It shows that Swift & Company's profits come chiefly from savings and the elimination of waste.

It tells why a food monopoly by any packer or group of packers is impossible.

There are chapters on the Consent Decree and its modification; on Swift's service to the small retailer; on the incessant competition in the packing business; on Swift & Company's marvelous distributive system—and many other important subjects.

A. HART M'KEE DIES IN N.Y.

A. Hart McKee, 61, son of the late H. Sellers McKee, pioneer glass manufacturer of the Pittsburgh district, died yesterday in New York.

The McKees were long socially prominent here. The son, a graduate of Princeton, left here about 30 years ago, making his residence in New York.

The elder McKee, his sons, A. Hart and Thomas, about 40 years ago shifted their glass making operations to Westmoreland County, from the South Side. They built the town of Jeannette, which was named for the wife of the elder McKee and mother of the two sons.

At the death of his father, A. Hart McKee inherited a fortune estimated at $12,000,000. He was well known as a yachtsman and a collector of jewelry and antiques.

Soon after his graduation he married Lydia Sutton, of Long Branch, N. J. He was later divorced and a few months later married Cornelia Baxter, daughter of a Southern colonel. They also were divorced through proceedings instituted in Paris.

He leaves his wife, Alice L. McKee, and three children, the Countess de Mailly-Chalen, of Paris; Mrs. J. Whitla Stimson, of Washington, and Andre McKee, of Paris.

Auto Strikes Safety Zone; Man Arrested

Harry Rinne, 28, of 1245 Lincoln avenue, was held at North Side Police Station today on a charge of violating the automobile laws after, police said, his automobile crashed into a safety zone on Federal street and the Fort Wayne Station. He was treated at Allegheny General Hospital.

Feel Run Down and Out of Sorts?

If you do your're probably suffering from vitamin starvation. Any doctor will tell you that the average normal diet doesn't supply half enough vitamins. That's why you get cross and grumpy—tired and run down.

To correct this condition doctors here are urging the wider use of cod liver oil. But don't take it the old-fashioned liquid way. Take cod liver oil in easy, tasteless tablets.

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets give you all the vitamins . . . all the healthful benefits of the liquid oil . . . everything but that fishy, oily taste. That's why these tablets have been approved by the experts of Good Housekeeping Institute.

So to avoid the dangers that come with vitamin starvation, go to your druggist and get a box of McCoy's today. Take them regularly and faithfully just as you would take any other food. New pep—new health and vigor will be your sure reward. 60 tablets—60 cents.

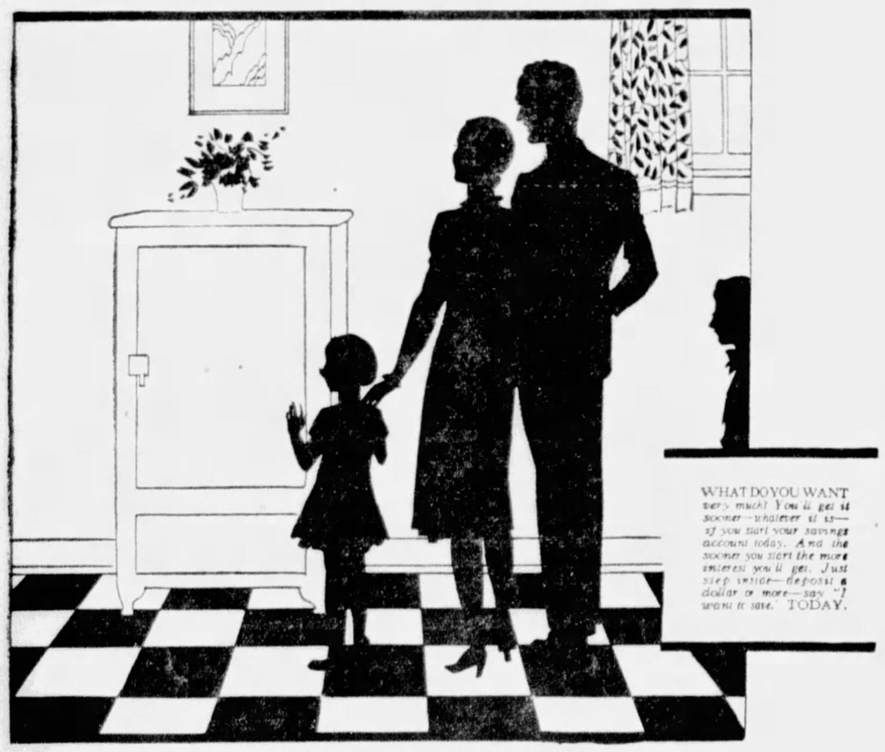
THINGS WORTH SAVING FOR . . .



WHAT DO YOU WANT very much? You'll get it sooner—whatever it is—if you start your savings account today. And the sooner you start the more interest you'll get. Just step inside—deposit a dollar or more—say "I want to save." TODAY.

THEY THOUGHT OF THE

CHILDRENS' MILK

How they had longed for an automatic refrigerator—ever since they first saw one at their neighbor's—saw the trouble it saved . . . the uncanny convenience of having coldness made to order . . . the assurance that everything—even the milk for the baby—is kept fresh and clean and pure. They thought they couldn't afford one.

But now an automatic refrigerator stands in their kitchen. They got it by saving.

You can get one that way, too. It takes only a very small deposit to open a savings account with the Farmers Deposit National Bank. By adding a little each week or each month—and with the help of the interest we give you every six months at the rate of 4% per annum—you'll soon have the money to buy that automatic refrigerator—or whatever it is you want most. Come in and start your savings account today.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Trust and Faith All Right If Not Used Foolishly

Gossip—sly, dreadful stories—dragging their slimy trail across Jo's happiness, trying to poison it—and blot it out.

"I won't believe them!" she cries hotly. "They're just lies . . . horrid, spiteful lies, told to kill my love and turn my folks against Bill" . . . Here's the whole story:

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I'm so unhappy! I've a wonderful mother, who does everything possible in this world for my brother and me. All but one thing. She will not listen to my troubles.

Trying to Kill Love

"My brother gets to sob out his woes on mother's understanding shoulder but, when I'm in trouble, I'm left to fight my battles myself, without one speck of love or sympathy. And my heart is just breaking now. Here's what happened to me.

"I fell in love with the one man in all the world for me. He is wonderful, and has proved his love in a hundred and one ways. His folks approve of me, and we had planned to be married next June.

He was married about eight years ago, and had it annulled. Now his ex-wife is circulating lies, and trying her best to kill my love for him, by telling me evil stories about him. I had never believed them, because he had told me of his past, and I have faith in him, and always will have.

"But now this woman is doing more harm. She is telling my folks things to turn them against him!

Must Help Herself

"Sally, I love him more than life, and I won't give him up for this selfish, ugly-talking woman! But I just don't know what to do. I am so miserable.

"Please help me. I need it so. Please help and make me happy!

"UNHAPPY JO."

Help you and make you happy, Pal?

That's a pretty large order, isn't it? And I'm not sure that I would fill it, even if I could . . . because the only real lasting happiness you'll ever find in this old world will come from helping yourself, and standing on your own feet.

I can't possibly tell you what to do in your present difficulty, because I know even less of what it's all about than you do, so I can't tell you whether this young man is worth your time and your faith or not.

But I can tell you this much. If you're old enough to think seriously of marriage, if you're old enough to make decisions, you must be prepared to stand by them regardless of what others say or think. And unless you do stand by them, your life will be one long mess of slipping and sliding and dodging this way and that.

But before you make decisions, do your best to make sure they're the right ones, honey. Use your head as well as your heart, because hearts sometimes fool us. It is quite true that this young man may be all you think he is. And the woman may be talking purely from jealousy and spite.

Learn the Facts

On the other hand, she may know what she is talking about, and be telling the truth as she sees it. So be very sure that your faith in him is justified before you trust him with your happiness. Stop having hysterics all over the lot, and find out. Find out what he really is—not what you want to believe he is today as well as what he was yesterday. He may have been a poor stick once, and snapped out of it.

Trust and faith are noble sentiments, honey, provided we don't use them foolishly and blindly. But faith in someone who doesn't rate faith will buy you nothing but grief and misery.

So watch your step. Then, if he really is all wall and a yard wide stick by him. Make your decision and hold to it, no matter who says what.

Sometimes Kin Conceal Talents So Star of Family May Succeed—Fay King

DON'T PUT YOURSELF FOWARD
I DON'T HAVE ANY MORE CHANCE THAN AN UNDERSTUDY
OFTEN A SISTER JUST AS PRETTY AND CLEVER MUST KEEP IN THE BACKGROUND
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

Sometimes only death reveals the humble sister or brother of the great one.

Just as a cast must play a decidedly second fiddle to a star in a play or picture, so it is in many families.

Brothers and sisters just as clever and pretty conceal their talents and charms so that the star of the family may succeed without any hindrance or interference.

It is not always done reluctantly either. In many cases the others are happy and willing to efface themselves and contribute all that they can in every way toward the success of the one.

But in some instances such outstanding favoritism and general sacrifice creates a feeling of inferiority, and keeps the rest from their own possible success.

Phil Veritzen Scores With Barbed Retort

I am not usually given to the performance popularly known as "kicking over the apple cart," but for a scant second or two after my little speech explaining to Mr. Seibel that the flowers sent by Mr. Veritzen were in honor of his son's fiancee, I thought I had succeeded in accomplishing the feat. My employer's face took on a purplish tinge and something sinister, menacing, gleamed from his eyes. Then the flush gave way to his usual pallor, and his eyes were again calm, though faintly mocking.

"You see, Mr. Seibel," he said coolly, "Mrs. Graham, possessing a decided inferiority complex, cannot imagine any other reason why flowers should be sent to her party."

He had scored, decidedly, and, already regretting the little temper fit which had been responsible for my baiting him, I was willing to call quits. Just why, after all my efforts to keep the great producer placated and in a tolerant mood toward Noel and Mary, I had risked everything for which I had worked by this open announcement of the betrothal between Mr. Veritzen's son and Dickey niece, I was at a loss to know, although I guessed that Mr. Veritzen's subtle assumption of proprietorship in the party had been the last straw in the stock of irritations which I had been piling up against him, and that I momentarily had taken leave of what my mother-in-law calls "the little senses I was born with."

Mr. Seibel bowed with an inscrutable look, and I would have given much to know what was going on behind his keen eyes.

"If you will come this way," he said, and led the way to the room just back of the dining-room—which was, indeed, a part of it—where Purnell with a flourish was opening the door to an array of boys burdened with huge boxes. I had found out that Purnell would be off duty from 2 o'clock on, and had promptly commandeered his services.

Mr. Veritzen took up his station behind one of the empty tables which almost filled the rear room, and motioned the boys peremptorily to bring the boxes to it and undo them. Most meticulously he scrutinized the masses of blooms they contained, giving no word of commendation, but unceremoniously bundling two of the boxes back with the biting injunction to "see that these are replaced by something decent, if your people ever want me to come into your shops again." And when the boys had scurried away, he strode up and down in one of the temperamental rages so well known by his office force, uttering anathemas against the whole tribe of florists.

Mr. Seibel looked on imperturbably, but I guessed his disapproval, dreaded the cynical inquiry which I feared was going on in his brain. With an enthusiasm which, fortunately, I did not need to feign, I turned to the boxes of flowers upon the tables and exclaimed at their beauty.

"Oh! Mr. Veritzen! How exquisite! And how many blossoms! You have been far too lavish."

He whirled from his pacing and came to my side looking down with me at the masses of roses in all shades of yellow, at the gaudier but effective calendulas, and at the long spikes of snapdragon, all resting against fronds of delicate green.

"These are not so bad," he said, grudgingly.

"Bad!" I echoed. "You are pleased to be facetious. I really need Marion or Mary with their list of 'marvelous' and 'wonderful' and 'fascinating' and 'spiffy' to do real justice to them. This will be a lavishly decorated ballroom indeed."

He glanced at the cunningly fashioned breaks in the molding running around the whole of the big room, breaks which widened into shelves for flower receptacles.

"You will need more than these if all those are to hold clusters of flowers," he said.

"Oh! I'm sure there will be more than enough," I answered. "I am going to steal some of these roses for my dinner decoration, they are much more to my liking than the ones I ordered."

"But I thought you understood," he said quickly. "I already have ordered the dinner decoration, but I told them not to bring it until the latest possible moment—that will be, when?" he turned to Mr. Seibel.

"Half after 4," Mr. Seibel returned promptly. "I will see that the cloth is laid at that time. Then the decoration can be put in place, and the silver and china put on afterward."

"I will see that it is here at that time," Mr. Veritzen promised, then turned to me as if the restaurant proprietor were not present.

"I do so hope you will like it," he said, "and I do not want you to see it until it is properly in its place upon the table. Won't you keep away from the dining room at that time until it is in place?"

His voice was tender, pleading, and two widely different emotions shook me, wrathful chagrin that Mr. Seibel should have heard him, and thankfulness that Dicky had not yet come to the dining room.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Host and Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young girl of 20 was given a birthday dinner party by her mother and father at their home. Is it proper for the parents to be at the dinner table with the guests, or should the parents eat their dinner alone?

S. E.

Since the girl's mother and father are the hostess and host of the occasion, they should indeed be at the dinner table. Without the hosts of the party, the dinner would be what is known as "giving 'Hamlet' without the Dane." Such an event would be socially most awkward and out of order.

The mother of the girl sits at the head of the table, and her father sits opposite her, in the place of host-of-the-home.

Carrying the Books.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I go about with a boy who does not go to the same school that I attend. He called for me one afternoon and we had a dispute about my books. He thinks that as soon as a girl starts to walk with a boy she should hand him her books. I think she should not. I think he should ask the girl if he may carry her books. Who is right?

PEGGY.

You are right, Peggy. This young gallant may think that a girl should at once hand him her books to carry, but I'm sure that most gallants would consider this a bit "forward."

Asking Permission to Call.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. A says that at a supper I intend to have that my young man friend should act as host and B says that it isn't necessary. Who is right?

2. Is it correct for a young girl to invite a young man to her home rather than wait for him to ask permission to call?

A. M.

1. B is right.

2. Either is correct. She may, with gracious propriety, invite him to share the hospitality of her home. On the other hand, it is, of course, correct and gallant for the young man to ask a girl's permission to call on her.

Chatting With My Readers.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please send me a booklet on correct manners if you have one. Also a booklet on how to eat all kinds of different foods.

J. P.

I have no such booklets. I'm sorry. But if you will be so kind as to send me definite questions on good form and good taste, I shall be most happy to chat with you about them. Do you follow the column every day? I'm sure that at least some of the questions that my kind readers ask will be ones that may have been bothering you, too.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Run-Down Condition Invites "Cold" Germs

We all sneeze and we all cough. Yet how many of us cover our mouths when we do this? Neglect of this little precaution is the main cause for most of the colds and winter ailments so common in this country.

Dr. Copeland

Do you know that among every 1,000 men employed there are more than a hundred cases of disability every year? This illness, whatever it is, lasts anywhere from one to eight days. More than half of this number are disabled because of diseases in the breathing organs. Among them are included colds, bronchitis, grip, influenza and pneumonia.

Diseases of this type are spread by the spraying of the secretions of the nose and throat in coughing, sneezing, spitting and talking. People who are tired and are in run-down condition, when exposed to such dangers, quickly contract the infection. In their turn, they spread it to others.

Any person who has a cold and is in any way lowered in health should keep away from crowds. Children who have colds should be kept home and not be permitted to attend classes. By insisting on this rule, not only will they get well quicker, but they will not be a source of danger to other children.

Sneezing or coughing in such a way as to spread infection should be avoided. Always attempt to catch a sneeze in a handkerchief. If you have a cold do not talk into people's faces. By no means go close to a child if you have a cold.

The common habit of embracing and kissing children has led to many infections that could have been prevented. This applies to so serious a disease as tuberculosis, too.

In spite of the numerous signs issued by local health bureaus, spitting is still a common vice in this country, and it is most dangerous to health.

We are too much concerned with the cure of these ailments rather than with their cause and possible prevention. We recall the well-known adage, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Yet in this matter very few of us apply that wise rule.

Proper regard to the dangers from sneezing, coughing, spitting and talking will do much to better the public health. The diseases I have mentioned today are preventable. They cannot be prevented until the public will observe the simple rules of hygiene.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Hair needs an air bath once a day. Rub the fingers through the glorious crown and dig them into the scalp. Too much water waving prevents ventilation, which is too bad since the hair sings and dances when it flutters in the breezes.

When walking don't jar the body. Have spring in the heels. Clumping along does things to the delicate little hinges of the back bone that don't like to be disturbed. Place the feet on the pavement so that the pedestrian coming your way can't see the soles of your shoes. Don't point toes outward; point 'em straight ahead.

When there is a roll of fat between neck and shoulders, it can be pounded away. Have some member of the family take on the job. The adipose tissues should be kneaded firmly, slapped with flattened palms, hammered with closed hands. Follow with applications of towels which have been wrung out of ice cold water. This treatment works like magic.

How about the old topnot? Does it look like a composition of silly tresslocks or like something that has come sprouting out of the mattress? The best head of hair goes on a bender now and then, acts up, looks distraught. That is the time for the hot oil treatment, given the night before the shampoo. Pour three tablespoonsful of olive oil into a small tin cup, heat well, and keep in a hot water bath. Apply the oil to the scalp with pledgets of cotton. Massage the scalp briskly. Place a towel over the pillow slip to protect it. Next morning have a rousing shampoo. Old topnot will be all sweet and smiling again.

When ankles are bulky because they are fat, they can be reduced by means of massage. Clasp them with both hands and treat 'em rough. Adipose tissue when near the surface of the skin will break down under pressure. To tighten up slack muscles, try high kicking. Or jump rope.

When eye shadows are compounded with an oily base, they should be applied with cotton, then toned down with the finger ends. Shadow compacts must be applied carefully, so that loose powder won't fall into the eyes and set up an irritation. Orchid and mauve shadows are suitable for ladies with silvery hair or locks of cornsilk yaller.

Household Hints

Serve fruits raw whenever possible to save the vitamins.

Foods that spoil readily, such as milk, soup stock and meat should always be kept in the coldest part of the refrigerator.

When roasting a piece of meat in an iron skillet with a handle, be sure to turn the handle toward the back of the oven and avoid severe burns from thoughtlessly grasping the hot handle.

After defrosting the refrigerator the glass tray in which the water has fallen should be washed thoroughly with soap or soda and water, dried well, and then returned to the box. The unit should be wiped clean and the pans scalded and refilled. Otherwise, in time, the ice cubes are apt to have an unpleasant taste to them.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, February 25

Although this day may be forecast as a very lively one, yet it may be a disagreeably exciting one, owing to the preponderance of the adverse lunar aspects. There are many dangers from impetuous and energetic stimuli, particularly in employment or with those in authority. This also applies to all manner of new undertakings or propositions, and may find an unhappy reaction in purely personal relations or interests, unless a calm and deliberate course of action be adhered to and deception and treachery be forestalled.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to encounter a year of generally unsatisfactory conditions, with delays, disappointments and frustration, although things may be lively and the energies high pitched. Calm, wise and well-managed conduct may bring adjustments, but employment and new undertakings are under especial jeopardy. Personal affairs may likewise prove inharmonious unless tact be safely adhered to.

A child born on this day should be quick, active and aggressive, perhaps encountering much opposition and subtle attack in its affairs.

ALL children are subject to little upsets. They come at unexpected times. They seem twice as serious in the dead of night. But there's one form of comfort on which a mother can always rely; good old Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation can't harm the tiniest infant. Yet mild as it is, it soothes a restless, fretful baby like nothing else. Its quick relief soon sees the youngster comfortable once more, back to sleep. Even an attack of colic, or diarrhea, yields to the soothing influence of Castoria.

Keep Castoria in mind, and keep a bottle in the house always. Give it to any child whose tongue is coated, or whose breath is bad. Continue with Castoria until the child is grown!

BUSY NIGHT AT STUDIO FURNISHES LURE FOR VISITORS

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

We have been asked many times what night is best to visit KDKA studios. Everyone wants to go when he can see the most action of commercial portraits.

We know of no better night than Tuesday when no less than four quality programs originate in the William Penn roof annex. The high spot of the evening is always the Pioneer Salute at 10 o'clock. This feature is produced entirely by Pittsburgh talent and goes to 32 stations in the NBC chain. Zoel Parenteau and T. J. Vastine in the roles of conductors Frederick G. Rodgers as the narrator and Louis L. Kaufman as the announcer always furnish a pleasant spectacle for those who have never seen a program in the making. Our sister city of Cleveland is the subject tonight.

We don't question that Lorna Fantin can see lots of things that other people can't. Look at those eyes, those—no, stop—just those eyes. With them she is to peer into Morton Downey's horoscope on WJAS at 8:15 tonight. Morton sings on WJAS at 10:30.

* * *

One who signs himself "Old Timer" pens us that Al Llewelyn, WJAS at 8:15 tonight, once sang illustrated songs in a small movie house at Duquesne.

QUESTION A DAY:

I have been told that Howard Barlow, the CBS Symphony conductor, once directed an orchestra in a Pittsburgh theater. Is this true?—V. S., Dormont.

Answer—Not to our knowledge. However, Barlow is well known here. He was born in Plain City, O., and has traveled much throughout Western Pennsylvania.

"Buddy" Stewart, the fellow who assembles our radio pictures in the composing room, heartily recommends the Cotton Queen Minstrel Show on WLW at 10 tonight.

Ludwig Laurier, conductor of the Black and Gold Room Orchestra and the Slumber Music period, studied music in Germany under Richard Strauss, Arthur Nikisch and Hans Richter.

As we predicted many days ago, the Landt Trio and White show up on WJZ at 8:30 tonight as the "Breyer Boys," a sponsored program.

Which reminds us that a feminine artist visiting KDKA the Claude Morris, the announcer, is taking in the sea zephyrs after a nervous breakdown.

Etzi Covalo's Orchestra and Bebe Falvo return to the air tomorrow midnight over KQV.

Substitution of a Melba Memorial Service for the Careless Love sketch last night was a noble gesture by NBC. Although the Australian nightingale was heard but few times on the radio, she was known and beloved by thousands—aye, millions.

Sax Rohmer, novelist, is to be Uncle Henry's guest on the Magazine Hour Sunday night via KDKA.

WOR celebrated its ninth anniversary with much ado. There was a short sketch by the cast of Main Street which feature first brought George Frame Brown of "Real Folks" to the attention of radio's public. Incidentally, "Main Street" is to return to WOR Thursday night, March 5, at 8 o'clock as a weekly feature.

Speaking of WOR programs, have you ever heard "Moonbeams" at 11:30? It is a classic.

Almost as disappointing as those dead thuds of the Liberty Bell was the brief time allotted by CBS to Admiral Byrd on the Detroit program last night. The admiral is an accomplished radio speaker as well as our ideal of a hero. But he had little chance last night with everybody else taking advantage of the spotlight. It was a gross injustice.

Dear Mr. Martin:

Why don't you tell your readers about the successful radio show in Greensburg last week? We follow your column every night and were particularly pleased to see and hear you as honor guest. We also enjoyed Paul J. Miller and John K. Chapel, the Russian Count of KQV. Albert Dilkes.

Insurance Head Tells Why He Has Created a Trust

Radio Speaker

William M. Duff, president of the Edward A. Woods Agency, the largest life insurance agency in the world, and a director of The Colonial Trust Company, explained in a radio talk over KDKA why he has placed all his life insurance in a trust at The Colonial.

"As a life insurance man I have such confidence in The Colonial," he said, "that I have created an insurance trust with it, under which all my life insurance at my death will be payable to The Colonial, to be held in trust and used, both principal and income, for those in whom I am vitally interested, and in such a broad way that the funds may be used for their comfort and general welfare, not only for a period of years, but during the whole of their lives.

The Colonial a Pioneer.

"I have created this trust because I have known of so many men and women who, in their lifetimes, made unusual sacrifices in order to pay premiums on life insurance policies and then, after their death, I have seen their greatest hopes fail of realization because of neglect to provide proper means of investment and distribution for the life insurance proceeds.

"The life insurance trust is one of the latest methods of trust company service, having come into general use only during the last 10 years, and it is not, therefore, widely known. The Colonial Trust was probably one of the first trust companies in Allegheny county to advocate its use.

Recommends The Colonial.

"The Colonial is one of the oldest trust companies in Western Pennsylvania. It is fully equipped to act in every trust capacity. For many years I have held a very high regard for the integrity and business ability of its officers. I commend The Colonial to you as not only capable of handling all affairs of your own finances, but also those affairs which affect the welfare and happiness of your family after you are gone."

WILLIAM M. DUFF,

President and manager of the Edward A. Woods Company, a speaker on The Colonial Trust Company's radio program at KDKA.

Time Is Short for Income Tax Returns

Returns on your 1930 income must be made to the Government on or before March 15. You may save yourself much trouble and annoyance by doing this duty early.

SAVE $7 A WEEK AND GET $1,500

Many depositors at The Colonial Trust Company make regular weekly deposits of a specified sum. If you pick out an amount which you can save each week without sacrifice and then make a practice of saving it without fail, no matter what happens, you have the greatest chance of reaching your objective.

If you will deposit $7 a week, it will grow to $1,578.27 in four years. Of that sum, $122.27 will be the interest The Colonial will add to your account.

Radio Programs

The Colonial Trust Company broadcasts two programs each week from KDKA.

One, which features the only string choir on the air, is given each Friday evening at 7:15.

The other, a program arranged especially for women, is given each Monday morning at 11:45. On the latter program there are talks about problems which face many women, with suggestions for their solution.

BORROWING IS IMPORTANT

Officer Defines Different Types of Business Loans.

The lending of money to its customers is, of course, one of the primary functions of a bank. Many people who are entitled to bank accommodation do not realize it and do not know just how to go about the processes of commercial borrowing. To anyone who is in business this is an important matter, and every man ought to know what accommodations are rightfully his.

"One-Name Paper."

C. A. McClintock, Assistant to the President of The Colonial Trust, in discussing this matter said: "To make a loan at a bank, a person must, first of all, be favorably known to the officers of the institution. It follows that a reputation for straight living and square dealing is requisite. If such a person has demonstrated over a period of dealing with his bank, that he has the ability to make money in his business, he is in a position to borrow on his own name alone, backed, of course by a satisfactory statement of his business. This is called 'one-name paper.'

"Two-Name Paper."

"If, however, there is any question whether the borrower will be able to repay the loan when due, he is asked by the bank to secure a satisfactory endorser, one who will guarantee that the loan will be paid. This is called 'two-name paper.'

"The third type of loan is called a collateral loan, where the borrower pledges stocks, bonds, real estate or other security which will guarantee the payment.

"But a good reputation is the best basis for a loan. Any man who does not have a banking connection should make one at a convenient and friendly bank, and should freely and frankly ask its officers for business advice and counsel.

"The Colonial Trust Company welcomes new accounts and its officers are glad to confer on business matters at any time."

PAYING TAXES BY EASIER PLAN

The Colonial Offers Method of Accumulating Fund

An easier method of accumulating money to meet tax payments, including income taxes, and mortgage interest is offered to the public by The Colonial Trust Company.

Under this plan, it is possible to budget these and other large fixed charges, and to build up the necessary cash to meet them through monthly deposits in a special account.

Mrs. Karl Emmerling, Personal Service Officer of The Colonial, will be glad to discuss this plan with anyone who is interested.

Things to Protect

The following is a partial list of some of the things which almost everyone possesses and which deserve the protection of a Safe Deposit Vault: Stocks, bonds, wills, notes, mortgages, letters, heirlooms, keepsakes, deeds, leases, jewelry, tax receipts, auto titles, agreements, insurance policies, savings account books, copyrights. A box can be rented at The Colonial for as little as $5.00 a year.

Method of Replacing Market Losses Told

Trust Officer Explains Plan by Which Those Who Suffered in Securities Markets Can Quickly Provide Protection for Dependents.

One of the most serious things about the drop in securities values is that many a man whose family would have been well taken care of by his estate as it stood two years ago, would have very little to leave his family if death overtook him during the next year or two. Most men who lost money can recover, if given time, but there is a pressing need for some protection for his family in the period while he is building up his fortunes again.

One method of doing this was pointed out by Kenneth Buffington, Trust Officer of The Colonial Trust Company, in a recent radio address from KDKA. Mr. Buffington said, in part:

"Just as a business loses ground during periods of depression, so do individuals who are the owners of business. We will again see the return of conditions of 1927 and 1928, and as business profits, so will the individuals. It is, however, at best a slow progress.

Estate Goes Back to Par.

"How can the individuals better themselves during this period of reconstruction? What can replace their recent losses?

"There is no better form of savings and protection than life insurance. If a certain man, for example, had $50,000.00 in cash and securities two years ago and today had but $25,000.00, what can bring his fortune back to 'par' quicker than an additional $25,000.00 of life insurance? I do not mean that he would immediately and again be worth $50,000.00, but I do mean that in the event of his death his estate would immediately and and again be worth 'par.'

"There can be no question but that the estate of many a man today needs the protection of some additional life insurance to more evenly balance his affairs. Even if an individual cannot afford to regain his former status through this method, he probably could carry sufficient additional life insurance to at least protect his present assets. As a temporary expedient, the modern five or ten-year convertible term policies will give the maximum protection at the lowest immediate outlay of cash. The premiums are considerably less and the policies may be converted during or at the end of the term for any of the standard forms. In the meantime, his assets will have been protected.

To Help Pay Premiums.

"The Colonial Trust Company does not sell life insurance. It does, however, believe in life insurance and, having served many years as executor or administrator in many estates, both large and small, fully realizes the value of insurance to anyone's estate. We frequently find that even a small amount of insurance can prevent the sacrifice of securities and save an estate which might otherwise be insolvent.

"The Colonial Trust Company can be of particular service to you in connection with this matter through its premium payment plan—an arrangement which enables you to pay life insurance premiums on a monthly basis, just as you pay your rent. It is a service rendered to you without cost. Ask one of our trust officers about the Premium Payment Plan and the Life Insurance Trust Agreement."

TRUST MEANS MORE MONEY TO CHILDREN

No person wants to pay any more taxes than he or she can help, and the manner in which a Life Insurance Trust can reduce the liability of tax payments is one of the things which women like in such an arrangement.

If a husband leaves his insurance money payable direct to his wife for her protection and that of their children, the money becomes part of the wife's personal estate; upon her death, it is subject to inheritance taxes and to the regular administration expenses of her estate.

If, however, a husband leaves his insurance money in a trust for his wife and children, there is no inheritance tax levied upon it at the death of either the husband or the wife, and it also escapes administration expenses in connection with the estate.

This is but one of scores of advantages which Life Insurance Trusts offer. They relieve women of the responsibility of investing money; they keep the money constantly invested at the highest safe rate of income; they provide the utmost flexibility, so that a widow can have from the principal of the trust any amount of money that may be needed to meet emergencies or extra demands.

During the life of the insured, the trust agreement may be altered or revoked at any time with the same ease that a will may be changed or destroyed.

Beautiful Music Is The Colonial's Offering

A reputation for beautiful music has been achieved by The Colonial Trust Company's Friday evening broadcasts from KDKA. Among recent selections have been:

"Merry Widow," by Franz Lehar.
"Liebesleid" and "Caprice Vennoise," by Fritz Kreisler.
"The Last Dream" and "Open Thy Blue Eyes," by Massenet.
"Legends" and the complete suite "A Day in May," by Friml.
"Spring Song," by Mendelssohn.
"To a Water Lily," by MacDowell.
"In Arcady," by Nevin.
"Lullaby," by Godowsky.
"Eastern Romance," by Rimsky-Korsakoff.
"Ave Maria," by Schubert.
"Soldier's Song," by Moskowski.
"Twilight Voices," by Granville English.

More People Allowing Interest to Accumulate

There has been an increased tendency in the past year or eighteen months for owners of savings accounts to permit their interest to accumulate.

Many people who have been preaching the wisdom of widespread spending in times like this to offset industry and commercial depression have unwittingly given rise to the idea that money in savings accounts is like money locked up in a vault or withdrawn from circulation. R. D. Wethereil, Manager of the Savings Department at The Colonial, points out that this is far from the truth, that money in savings accounts is not hoarded but is placed in the channels of trade instantly. Through the lending operations of the bank, it is invested in business, in homebuilding, in industrial construction, in financing commercial businesses and in many other places where it performs an indispensable function in the creating of prosperity.

ADDITIONAL RADIO NEWS

The Loudspeaker

—By LOUIS REID—

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—It is the time of the year when the ballyhoo boys of the studios, stumped for something to tell the world concerning the personalities of the air, go in for large and heaping dishes of applesauce.

Great gobs of it lie upon the polished rosewood of this department, all designed to present in a new light the activities and attitudes of radio artists. The trouble is the light is not new. The boys have failed to commune with their imaginations. They have rushed to the nearest cupboard and reached for outworn stencils, believing perhaps that an outworn stencil is better than none at all.

Thus we learn that Maurice Chevalier "is not so much interested in the money he will make broadcasting as he is in the drama of the thing. Chevalier is one actor who doesn't look on money as the end-all and be-all. But to sing for an audience that will number a large part of the United States! Ah, that is different! There is an artistic thrill in that. And he loves thrills."

How many times have you been acquainted with a similar viewpoint on the part of other artists? Particularly those on the concert stage?

Chevalier happens to be one of the most attractive personalities in the world of entertainment. Being so, he must gag at such whoopla.

Passing to Efrem Zimbalist we find the mimeograph men quoting the violin virtuoso, quoting him in such a statestatement as "'America leads the world in every form of musical activity. We have left Germany far behind.'"

When did our composers, for example, leave Richard Strauss behind?

Comes, too, strange news of Damrosch. We are informed that "the modern American foxtrot is recognized by Walter Damrosch with an honored place in his 1931-32 schedule of educational broadcasts to the nation's schools and colleges . . . He will make his former Carnegie Hall colleagues play Gershwin's 'I Got Rhythm' as an example of America's own foxtrot."

And Damrosch is quoted, too. Into his mouth the press agents have stuffed these words:

"The program of our own national dances comprises not only a cowboy's and old fiddler's 'breakdown' but an example of the most recent American dance, the syncopated rhythm of which has taken the entire world by storm—the foxtrot."

Do you notice how carefully the press agents lead Damrosch around the word "jazz." Not once is it given utterance. Dear, dear, no. Nothing so vulgar, so disreputable as "jazz" could be identified with Damrosch. And we have a fine display of weasel-wording. We learn that "I Got Rhythm" becomes for classic music merely a fox trot.

COMEDY, MUSICAL AND PLAIN, OCCUPIES ATTENTION OF STAGE CRITICS

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Cuff is the name of a policeman in one of Wilkie Collins' weird and complicated fictions, and Cuff is the name of the policeman in "Michael and Mary," the comedy of A. A. Milne which Madge Kennedy brought to the Alvin Theater last night. The link connecting these two Cuffs is obvious in several ways. Milne's Cuff has read Wilkie Collins, and that started him to inventing weird and complex plots of his own. And undoubtedly he has helped Milne to concoct the whole scenario of "Michael and Mary," while Milne has just added the beamish humor that is his very own.

George Seibel

In a corner of the British Museum we meet, by chance, Michael and Mary, he a budding young author, she a deserted young wife. She is in despair—and he becomes her guardian angel even as Queen Victoria and Charles Dickens could have desired.

In the second scene Michael's father, a worthy clergyman, drops in by chance and gives his son the very good advice to marry Mary. Which Michael and Mary decide to do, taking the risks of bigamy rather than the odium of irregularity.

And of course in the second act, again by chance, the truant husband turns up and tries blackmail. He tells about his weak heart as soon as he comes on, and in five minutes he is dead, having been rudely pushed by Michael.

AS CUFF WOULD WRITE IT

Instead of calling a doctor, and filling him a strange caller had been taken ill and fallen over, Milne finishes the act as Cuff would write it. He invents an elaborate and wild fiction, rehearses it, and tells it to the police with such a guilty air that it's no wonder Cuff suspects the truth. But the truth is so much stranger than the fiction that the spector of Police laughs at Cuff's theory.

It is necessary to get a new start for the third act, and so, by chance again, the young son of Michael and Mary has got himself married. And by another chance the deceased first husband of Mary bobs up in another police case, and Cuff comes on at the close to tell all about it.

For all we know this case has infinite ramifications and Mary had married a dozen. It would not do to blame the men, for Madge Kennedy makes Mary quite sweet and appealing enough to ensnare any masculine heart. This most sympathetic comedienne stands like a flesh-and-blood human figure in the meshes of the tangled plot, and we know she is real though her story is a wild dream of Cuff and Milne.

Terence Neill as Michael also becomes convincing after the first scene, in which he is mechanically talkative without even the excuse of a preliminary brandy and soda to loosen his tongue.

HUMOR OF THE PLAY

One is inclined to forgive Milne and Cuff all their desperately contrived accumulation of chances after one savors the humor of the play. The little boy's letter, in which he counts his savings and asks "how much a bloodhound will cost," is in Milne's best vein. To their offspring Michael and Mary are known as Binx and Bubbles, which would identify them at once as members of Milne's family. The dialogue is usually whimsical, like this, and often sentimental in the wholesome but sweet-lavender style of Dickens.

What matter, the play, which is really a novel spread over 26 years, holds the interest of the spectator like Michael's story, in which a collar stud had been lost 175 pages before, yet it wasn't one of those stories which, once put down, you can't take up again. "Michael and Mary" is always interesting and sometimes thrilling. That is where Cuff "co-elaborated."

Besides it gives a very good company an opportunity to do very sympathetic work. Maurice Greet as Cuff is from Gad's Hill. Fay Ball as Romo is a sweet blend of the modern girl with the old-time heart and ways. Clinton Sundberg as David is a likable specimen of adolescence. And the minor characters, called in by Cuff and Milne whenever the plot needs a push or a turn of the screw, have all some human quality of appeal.

"Michael and Mary" is worth seeing for Madge Kennedy—and to remind us of Wilkie Collins.

In Comedy

Grace George comes to the Alvin next week in St. John Ervine's comedy of divorce and remarriage, "The First Mrs. Fraser."

PARADE WILL OPEN STANLEY CELEBRATION

Beginning with a parade at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, celebration of the Stanley Theater's third anniversary will be held. Pictorial representation of each of the five pictures, which come to the Stanley in March, will be one of the features of the parade, which will include a police escort, a band and a huge Chinese dragon.

A gigantic birthday cake has been given to the Stanley. Dick Powell, aided by a dozen girls, will cut and distribute the cake along the route.

Floats will be allotted to the following picture features of anniversary month: "Dracula," "East Lynne," "My Past," screen adaptation of "Ex-Mistress," "Connecticut Yankee," with Will Rogers, and "Millie."

Four bands are to be included in the parade.

Smart Nixon Audience Sees 'Making Mary' and Finds It Dull

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Making Mary," greeted by a capacity smartly dressed audience in the Nixon last night, is announced by the program to be a "new musical comedy." The first adjective of that description is appropriate—the piece IS new. As for the rest of it—well, if it were funnier it would be comedy. And if it had some tunes it would be musical. You know—something like the old time cut-ups of the variety stage who sadly mourned that if they had some ham they could have ham and eggs were it not for the lack of eggs.

Yet all is not a total loss—there's the dancing. It is the heavy work on the part of the ensemble, staged by John Boyle, plus a few stepping specialties, that keeps the show alive throughout a devious story which presents college life as a study of gin.

DANCERS WELL TRAINED

Mr. Boyle has trained his boys and girls well and the result is seen in several exhibitions of ensemble dancing that is marked by intricate groupings and unusual figure changes while the dancers are hoofing it lustily, gracefully and—since this is college—noisily. They are youthful and speedy, the steppers, and they do their part to give the customers their money's worth.

Will Ahern, as a goofy college boy, has the chief comedy role. He works hard to get a laugh but has little success. He clicks, however, in the finale of the first act, when he does one of those squatty dances so well the audience calls for more. And doesn't get it.

STOPS THE SHOW

It is the same with the dancing specialist, not named in the program, who stops the show in the opening scene of the second act. Lou Parker does an acrobatic dance that is well liked too. So much attention is being paid the dancing because the writer is trying hard to say something good about a new show, that may possibly be whipped into something really presentable if the play doctors work hard enough the rest of the week.

June Martell, a cute and pretty youngster, is the Mary of the title. Part of her duty is to do "impressions" of Lenore Ulric and Marlene Dietrich. She shouldn't. Helen Patterson has a vamp role which she carries off well and she dances nicely, too. Audrey Christie, as a hoyden, William Frawley, as a [illegible]on agent, Helen Eley, Edith Davis, Tom Monroe and Bradley Case do their parts as well as the book allows.

Many a man has started on the road to success from a Help Wanted ad. Turn to the Classified Section and see what opportunities are offered today.

Wagner Opera Talk In P. M. I. Tonight

An informal talk will be given this evening in the Pittsburgh Musical Institute on the story of Richard Wagner's romantic opera, "The Flying Dutchman," which is to be presented by the German Grand Opera Company Saturday evening, March 7, in Syria Mosque. The synopsis of the opera will be given by Charles N. Boyd, with piano illustrations by Dallmeyer Russell and J. Frank Kennedy. Martha Eaton Brickman, soprano, will sing the "Senta" aria.

C. Aubrey Smith Now In Novarro Picture

C. Aubrey Smith, the distinguished British character actor, now appearing in "Daybreak," the new Ramon Novarro M-G-M vehicle, directed by Jacques Feyder, was a schoolmate of Sir Robert Baden-Powell, the famous English army man, and founder of the Boy Scouts. They were at Charterhouse School, London, together.

'UP POPS THE DEVIL' AND THE GIN IN THE PITT

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Up Pops the Devil" is the new George Sharp presentation in the Pitt. Albert Hackett and Frances Goodwin wrote this affair, which turns out to be one of those outspoken comedies. And for every brisk and orange-colored line there is a bottle of Gordon gin for a "chaser."

The scene is a studio apartment and the atmosphere is very much Bohemian. In the first act a young couple celebrate their first anniversary by deciding to get married. In the second act a blessed event is anticipated and a misunderstanding is realized. And in the third act the grand reconciliation is attained.

The principals in this gin-drinking comedy are a fellow who aspires to be a novelist and a girl who eventually becomes his wife. She gets a job and leaves him to run the apartment and write his novel. But time doesn't make a novelist and an apron doesn't make a housewife.

A THIRSTY CROWD!

Paul McGrath and Lulu May Hubbard portray these roles in capable style. There are numerous others in the cast. Robert Fiske wanders in and out as a penniless idler who has married "fifteen milion dollars." Which sounds perfect, but which, he admits "doesn't look so good on a pillow!"

Mabel Kroman floats around as a newspaper girl, who likes gin with her parties, and Hugh Banks is just another fellow with a big thirst. Young Charles Webster, who goes in for the technical direction behind scenes, is rather prominent as a literary agent. He wears a big mustache and is polite enough to refuse a drink.

MODERNS AND GIN

Suzanne Colby portrays a rich lady and wins attention because she is old-fashioned enough to like water and Edwin Vail is a sort of wandering troubadour who is lit up like a gasoline station. And there are others. Alice Ann Baker and John Winthrop are a couple of apartment hunters, Billy Link is a goofy laundryman, Katherine Maison is an intruder from the South, Regis Joyce wants to go to college so he sells magazine subscriptions and Clyde Schafer is John, the janitor.

There are laughs and entertainment in "Up Pops the Devil." But if you're planning an amateur performance for your church or school, we don't recommend this. It is old domestic comedy in modern dress; domestic comedy cooped up in a studio apartment with a lot of moderns and gin bottles.

After this week's performance it ought to be easy for Mr. Sharp's players to put on "Ten Nights In a Barroom."

STOCK BURLESQUE ACADEMY OFFERING

With Billy Hagan, comedian, heading the cast, "Manhattan Nights" stock burlesque, is the attraction in the Academy. Helping Hagan in comedy is Lou Costello. Nick Bloom, a North Side boy, also appears as a featured funster. Ann Evans, Pittsburgh burlesquer, Mildred Cozier and Nell Ryder, soubret, head the feminine principals. Olga Petrone, Hazel Devine and "Smiles," dancer, have important parts. Among the men are Jack Kelly, E. Tom Hayes, Ernie Holder and Al D. Browne. The Academy male quartet and 20 girls in the chorus complete the Academy's new stock company. "Manhattan Nights" is its first show.

Returning

Lino Manzoni will return next week to the Nixon in "Strictly Dishonorable," in which he played in that theater early in November.

Mayor to Address Club in 18th Ward

Mayor Charles H. Kline will be a speaker at a meeting of the Colored Civic Republican Club of the Eighteenth Ward on Friday evening. Other speakers scheduled are: John S. Herron, president of Council; Councilman George J. Kambach, Magistrate Thomas D. Jones, Eighteenth Ward chairman, and Attorney Robert L. Vann.

"..SO WISHY-WASHY!" SHE SAID

"Just how any one who has ever used PEBECO Tooth Paste can use anything else is beyond me!" exclaimed a woman noted for the flashing beauty of her teeth. "Other dentifrices are so wishy-washy, but you just know Pebeco is working!"...Correct! And she might have added: The after-taste is so clean, so refreshing, so cool that users are aptly calling Pebeco the "ICED" Dentifrice. Try this taste on your toothbrush today.

Doctor Smuggled Dope to Alma Rubens, Freed Her From Sanitarium as 'Cured'

Star Suffered Agonies in Room Just Vacated By Dead Patient

By ALMA RUBENS.

CHAPTER XXII.

If I tried for a thousand years to phrase my language I would never be able to describe my feelings when I saw that dead woman being carried out. I was terrified. I could picture her as myself!

The moment I had arrived there, I sensed something wrong. It was a dismal place. Leading up to the anteroom was a long, dark hallway, furnished in medieval style, with stern, wood-cuts and etchings hung on the walls.

I sat down on a long bench. Then I became aware of someone hammering; hammering on steel, as though they were nailing up bars.

My guess was right. They were. They were nailing up iron bars on the windows of the room—or cell, would be more descriptive — at the extreme end of the hall.

Miss Rubens

I got up and wandered down that way trying to peek in the door which was ajar. A nurse ran up, all excited:

"You can't go in there," she forbade. "You can't go in there. That's private."

I went back to my seat. A moment later the body was carried out. They didn't tell me it was a body. It was on a stretcher and covered with a sheet, but I saw a woman's bare foot protruding, and I knew it was a dead woman.

They had just passed the corner into an intersecting corridor, when my attention was attracted by my mother's arrival. She had driven all the way from the ranch and had got home too late to see me off and the pitiful circumstances under which I departed.

She did everything to try and comfort me.

But it was no use. I was too terrified to talk. I KNEW I was going to be placed in THAT cell, but I didn't tell her what I had seen. She broke down and began to cry.

In turn I tried to comfort her. I asked her to let me fight my own battle. I didn't mention my terrible row with Ric. I didn't tell her about the nailing up of the iron bars which I had seen.

By and by, she believed that I had consented to undergo treatment, although I impressed upon her the fact that I had not been legally committed. What inner fear, or intuitive sense led me to this I do not know, but, happily for me, I did. Otherwise, my stay there, in the end a futile one, might have been much longer.

Eventually, I was booked. Dr. C. did not appear again that day until long after my mother had gone. They wouldn't let my mother go into the room with me. She kissed me goodby in the hall after promising to write to me every day.

Bursts Into Tears

I tried hard to smile when she left, but steel myself as I would I burst into tears. She suspected I was keeping something from her, but I reassured her. She promised to return the next evening and to bring Ric with her.

The nurse came for me. She led me into the room, just as the institution carpenter was driving the last nail in the last bar. It was truly a cell. Dark and dreary. The only furniture was a drab looking dresser, of imitation oak, a small rocking chair that squeaked, and the bed. There was no mirror.

The bed had not been made: There it was, the coverings torn off and heaped on the floor, the mattress turned half way over on end, and the pillow, of the shoddiest muslin, perched on top of the upper end of the mattress like a ghostly specter, there to warn me away.

I shuddered. The perspiration came out in little beads on my forehead, and I became violently nauseated. I could imagine I saw the other woman's body, still lying there. No! It was my body!

Paces Cell

For hours and hours I paced the floor. Up and down. Up and down, the length of my cell. Occasionally, I would try the door, but it was tightly locked.

Once in a while a nurse would come in, a big hoop of keys rattling on her arm, and try to engage me in conversation. I paid no attention to her. She'd sit down in that chair and rock. The squeak almost drove me crazy.

Another woman came in and fixed the bed. She did not change the mattress, although she put on fresh linen—if linen you could call it. In reality, it was the same shoddy muslin as covered the pillow. Rough, unbleached.

Through the bars at the one window I could see the automobiles whizzing past on the roadway. I watched them until dark. Not thinking, not doing anything but standing there. I was too unnerved to really understand what was going on about me.

They brought supper. I didn't touch a bite. I don't even know what was on the tray. Again the nurse came in and tried to engage me in conversation. I paid no attention.

My mind was far away. My picture, which Ric wouldn't let me finish. His treatment for me. Proof then to me that he no longer loved me. My poor mother, unaware of what I had undergone. How long would I be here.

Oh! For a shot!

The deadly deprivation pains began. I had had nothing for almost 11 hours. I doubled over with the cramps and the nurse brought me a drink of water. I hurled it at her, drenching her completely.

She ran out and a moment later in came Dr. C., bowing and scraping, and smiling, like a cat which had just swallowed the canary.

He remained but a minute. I begged him for a "shot," but he would not listen.

And, a few minutes after he left, out went the sole light. I was left, fully dressed, and awake, without a light. I shook the door and a night attendant came. I asked him why I couldn't have one. He said it was against the rules.

I went back to the window and stood there, for hours and hours, it seemed, watching the red tail lights of passing automobiles fading in the distance, and trying to forget my pains.

Eventually, I dropped down on the same mattress on which that other poor woman died, and dropped off into a troubled sleep with all my clothes on.

Denied Dope

Four days and four nights it went on like this. I was getting no dope. I was in terrible pain. I could eat nothing. I could still see that dead woman in every waking moment and dream about her when I did fall asleep.

And then I broke down completely.

I suppose I became temporarily insane. When I came to I was wrapped in cold, wet blankets, my arms forcibly held so that I could not pull them off. A nurse sat beside me, rocking in that miserable, squeaky chair.

I begged her to release me, but it was not until hours later, when Dr. C. came in, that she did so. She went out, leaving me alone with him.

The moment she closed the door behind her, he smirked in a knowing manner. Then he winked, as he pulled from his sleeve a hypodermic needle which he had hidden there.

I ran to him like a young child would do to its father who had brought it home candy. Hate him I did. But at that particular moment I idolized him. He was my savior. He—and his needle—were my gods!

And all he gave me was possibly $10 worth of morphine, and the needle, both of which I hid under the the inner side of the semi-tubular feet of the chipped, gray-tiled bathtub, adjacent to my room.

How carefully I guarded that precious hoard through the intervening days of my incarceration there. I took half-portions, weakening the compound as much as I could and get results, so that I could make it last.

My mind cleared up. I changed completely. The regular day nurse, really a most conscientious woman, was overjoyed. She thought I was being cured. And she was happy in that belief.

I was happy, too, because I had my dope

At the end of three weeks my mother came. And, miracles of miracles, my husband came with her! My mother had called almost daily, but the hospital authorities had forbidden her seeing me, saying it would interfere with my treatments. Finally she demanded my release, and, as I was not legally committed, they had to let me go.

Dr. C. had told them I was cured. My mother was in heaven. Even Ric seemed glad. He kissed me for the first time in months.

And then, the first thing I did after we reached home, I confronted them both in the living room.

"You think I'm cured, don't you?" I snarled, turning towards by husband. "You're both fools. I'm still an addict. And now I'm going straight to destruction!"

Plans have been completed for two apartment buildings of 12 suites each to be erected in Parkfield street, Carrick, by Herman Kamin, East End builder. Nathan Leebov has been selected architect for the project.

A laboratory course in the design and control of concrete mixtures will be offered in March by Carnegie Institute of Technology to architects, contractors and others interested in concrete construction. The course, consisting of six evening sessions to be held from March 2 to 19, will meet in Engineering Hall under Prof. J. M. Daniels. This course will include and supplement the material presented in the lecture courses on design and control of concrete which were given by J. W. Kelly, of the Portland Cement Association, in 1926, 1927 and 1928.

The Pittsburgh Builders' Exchange will hold a noon-day luncheon meeting next Thursday in the Red Room of the Keystone Athletic Club. The speaker will be Raymond D. Evans, assistant U. S. district attorney. His subject will be "Narcotics." Edward Crump, Jr., will preside.

The Bureau of Building Inspection issued 187 building permits last month for building to cost $581,335. Of the 187 permits issued 66 were for new buildings, 22 to extensions and additions and 99 for alterations. In the same month of last year 217 permits were issued on building to cost $672,140.

John E. Murray, owner of lot 17, North Hills Estate, Ross Township, is having plans made for a home which he intends to construct on the property. The new house will cost approximately $15,000.

An improved property in Cochran road, Mt. Lebanon, has been purchased by Agnes M. O'Donovan from Marion L. Speakman for a private consideration. The lost measures 39x76 feet.

Mildred E. Dorsch has sold to Mary Mikulich an improved property on lot 42x110 feet in Marion avenue, Forrest Hills Borough.

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

"These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

During the months that Floyd Gibbons was acquiring radio fame and fortune simply because he talked fast, our own Albert K. ("Rosey") Rowswell, himself no tortoise, sat on the sidelines with nary a sneer to brighten up his sad features. Rowswell started talking like a chatterbox long before Floyd Gibbons ever gave radio a thought, long before radio, in fact.

Mr. Pfarr

Rowswell is a modest soul and does not invite comparison of his talking speed with that of Floyd Gibbons, but we have unearthed the facts. Gibbons, when pushed, can make 217 words a minute. Rowswell, electrical transcriptions prove, has done 328 words a minute. Another Pittsburgh accomplishment!

We have just enough local pride to suggest that Rowswell can talk faster than any other human alive, faster even that a temperamental wife when she discovers her mate has spent the night and the paycheck at poker.

And there is nothing flukey about Rowswell's record. He does not, for instance, cut the corners by sneaking in a lot of tiny prepositions and conjunctions. Rather, he tests himself by exercising many-syllabled adjectives and adverbs.

This or that:

From a spy: "Did you hear about the downtown bank policeman who was so big? His wife's health slipped, so he had to move to the West. Times being what they are, the bank decided to make his uniform do for the new man, so they had to pick one who'd fit the uniform. They finally discovered one that big. He fitted the uniform beautifully. But when he went up to the City-County Building to get his badge and be sworn in, it was discovered he had been born in Scotland, hadn't been naturalized and couldn't possibly be sworn in." (The point of this story is that the bank must have been Scotch, too.)

If you call the police to complain that the neighbors are making too much noise or that there's a strange man in the neighborhood, the chances are you'll talk with Bill Sloan, police operator. He handles complaints and things.

Once a man, breathless, staggered into Sloan's office carrying an automobile wire wheel from which dangled a chain and lock. He explained that when he parked his car for any length of time he always locked the front wheel to a pole. But this night the thieves had removed the locked wheel, substituted the spare and driven merrily on their way.

Another time a lady called to report that a poor, cold cat lay huddled against a signboard, starving, no doubt, and certainly freezing. Sloan notified the Irish policeman on the beat to rescue the cat.

An hour later the lady complained that the policeman had arrived and thrown his mace at the cat. Sloan located the cop and began to bawl him out.

"Lissen, young man," the policeman interrupted, "it's quit me job I will before I find meself playing nurse to polecats."

The unappreciative younger generation is our despair. A few nights ago we watched a 5-year-old boy trying to accomplish things with a miniature war tank. He'd wind up the tank and then send it spinning over the carpet against a chair. Finally he tired of this and asked for something with which to build a mountain which his tank might crawl up. We said we didn't have any mountain materials, but he insisted, so we told the 5-year-old to get us a model, and the little smart-aleck said anybody could make a mountain out of a molehill.

2 GAS STATIONS, COLLECTOR HELD UP

Police Seek Escaped Thugs; Insurance Man Attacked, Robbed of Day's Receipts

Police today were without trace of the bandits who robbed two gasoline stations and an insurance agent last night.

R. E. Kirker, attendant at the service station of the Standard Oil Company, Baum boulevard and Amber street, was held up by two armed bandits who obtained an unestimated amount of cash from a safe, police said. They fled in an automobile.

Obtaining only $4 from the cash register in the Gulf Refining Company's service station at 640 Mansfield avenue, three bandits took two street car tokens and a partly filled package of cigarets from Earl Ross, an attendant, of 1543 Evanston street, Sheraden. The automobile used by the bandits had been stolen a short time before, police said, from Butler and Fortieth streets.

Thomas W. Hunt, of 1318 Marvista street, North Side, an insurance collector, was robbed of $60 by two Negroes who attacked him after he alighted from a street car at California avenue and Marvista street. Hunt had collected the money during the day.

While walking in Grant street, near Diamond last night, Florence Meehan, of the Seventh Avenue Hotel, was robbed of a purse containing $35 by a man who snatched the bag and escaped.

Two armed men held up a lunch wagon at 7216 Kelly street and escaped with $6 taken from William Dixon, of 7035 Fleury way, night manager.

At the restaurant of Armanda Fontana, 579 Fifth avenue, where the front door had been pried open, $23 was taken from the cash register. A shotgun valued at $50 and $72 in cash were taken from the sporting goods store of J. W. Moon, 542 East Ohio street, where a window valued at $72 was broken.

HOLD FRIESEL RITES TONIGHT

Funeral services will be held tonight for George H. Friesel, 42, of 8 Lawson avenue, Crafton, secretary, treasurer and director of the United Engineering and Foundry Company, who died at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Sunday night. Services will be held in his home; burial will be private tomorrow morning.

Mr. Friesel

Mr. Friesel was born in Pittsburgh, and educated in local schools. He was first employed in 1905 in the accounting department of the United Engineering and Foundry Company. He was placed in charge of cost accounting of the Best Manufacturing Company, Oakmont, in 1914, and in 1915 became secretary to the manager of ordnance of the Poole Engineering and Machine Company, Baltimore. He again became associated with the United Engineering and Foundry Company in 1916, and was elected auditor in 1918. He became treasurer in 1923, and was elected secretary in 1929.

He was vice president, Pittsburgh chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants; director, Steel Founders' Society of America; member of the Keystone Club, Chartiers Heights Country Club, and Crafton Heights Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mr. Friesel leaves his parents, George W. and Susan Bridge Friesel; his widow, Laura Gibson Friesel; a son, George, and two daughters, Doris and Ruth Friesel.

REDS HERE PLAN JOB AGITATION TOMORROW

Demonstrations Will Be Held In Unison With Others In U. S. and Abroad

Pittsburgh Communists today were preparing to join in the international unemployment day demonstration tomorrow when unemployment insurance and other demands will be hurled at employers.

Although Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh has refused to grant members of the Trade Union Unity League a permit for a demonstration at Pennsylvania Station, Robert Woods, district secretary, declared today the demonstration will be held.

WALSH TAKES ACTION

Walsh said today he would have motorcycle and mounted police, detectives and a detail of foot police ready to quash any demonstration. He said leaders would be arrested at the first sign of trouble.

Several times before Communists here have been denied permits for street demonstrations, but went on with them, only to be disbanded by police before they reached their destination. Their last failure was several weeks ago when they marched to City-County Building to demand dole for unemployed workers in Pittsburgh.

Although their spokesman and several aides were able to get an audience with councilmen, the demonstration in front of the building was broken up.

The largest demonstrations in the United States are billed for New York, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago, Boston and Los Angeles. In Europe, Berlin has been chosen for the largest on the continent.

DECISION POSTPONED

County Court Judge Sarah Soffel today announced she would postpone her decision on the appeals of two members of the Unemployed Council against fines for disorderly conduct when they made speeches, without permission in City Council meeting, January 28. The postponement was announced when Assistant City Solicitor William H. Randolph reported that, through the press of other city business, he would be unable to present his brief in the case until today.

Nell Amder, 21, Grand street, and Ernest Caruthers, Negro, 29, Jacobs way, were arrested by police for disorderly conduct after they were ejected from the meeting of City Council during an unemployment demonstration, January 28. They were each fined $10, or 30 day in jail..

RATE DECISION WELCOME HERE

The decision of the Public Service Commission on the short haul rate late yesterday gives shippers in the Pittsburgh district about 75 per cent of what they asked for, shippers and steel company officials said. But even this means a saving of about $1,500,000 a year in rail rates to steel manufacturers in the district.

Donald O. Moore, traffic manager of the Chamber of Commerce, declared the effect of this would serve as a stimulus to business here, and no doubt will attract additional business enterprises.

Since the higher short rates, ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, went into effect May 21, Pittsburgh manufacturers of steel have been discriminated against to the extent of $1,500,000, it was said by shippers today.

Although real benefits are certain to result from the decision, another step must now be taken, said F. A. Ogden, general freight agent of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation.

2 BROTHERS DIE WITHIN 55 HRS.

Two brothers, each unaware of the fate of the other, died within 55 hours. They are the sons of Gustave and Lillian Weinhaus, 316 Linview avenue, who dazedly sit at the family home with lined and haggard faces, awaiting the double funeral which takes place tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

On Saturday morning, Elmer Weinhaus, 22, who was engaged to be married in June, died of pneumonia at the home of his parents. At noon yesterday, Gustave, Jr., 24, who had not so long ago been joking with his sick brother, urging him to cheer up, but little dreaming of what the future held for him, died in the Homeopathic Hospital of the same disease. Gustave leaves, besides his aged parents and brothers and sisters, a wife and an infant daughter.

Death's double blow has stunned the Weinhaus family, including, besides the dead brothers parents and Gustave's wife and little girl, three sisters, Martha, Edith and Evelyn, and two brothers, William and Earl.

Pershing Again Defied Foch on Moving Troops

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER XLIV.

The sixth session of the Supreme War Council was convened June 1, 1918. The important matter of further shipment of American troops was taken up.

As already indicated, it was my opinion that neither the character of the troops to be sent over nor their disposition was within the province of the Council to decide, but that these questions should be determined by ourselves according to circumstances and after discussion with the Allies.

So I objected to their consideration by the council, as such, and suggested a meeting outside the council, which was approved.

Gen. Pershing

Accordingly, in the late afternoon Gen. Foch, Lord Milner, British war minister, Gen. Weygand and I, with Cols. Conner and Boyd, met in the Prime Minister's room. Gen. Foch began by stating the serious condition of the Allies and proposed the continued shipment from America of nothing but infantry and machine gun units in June and July, in effect, 250,000 in each month.

Everyone realized the gravity of the Allied situation as strongly as he did, but, as previously and persistently contended by me, there were two sides to the question.

Gen. Foch especially was very positive and earnest, and in fact became quite excited, waving his hands and repeating: "The battle, the battle; nothing else counts."

With equal emphasis I urged that we must build up our organization as fast as possible to carry on the battle to the end, and that our program had been seriously interrupted by concessions already made.

I called attention to the fact that the railways all over France were on the point of breaking down for lack of efficient operators and of skilled workmen to repair rolling stock; that our ports would be hopelessly blocked unless we could improve the railways; that his plan would leave us 200,000 men short to complete combat units and fill up special

BOX CAR VETS HEAD FOR WEST

The Box Car Battalion, a group of disabled war veterans who came East from Seattle, Wash., in a box car, to plead the bonus cause at Washington, D. C., last week, left Pittsburgh yesterday on their return journey.

Aided by the Helping Hand committee, which provided clothes, food and shelter, and bus transportation to Chicago, the men left for their homes in the Far West. At Chicago they will continue their journey in the box car provided by the Milwaukee road. On their trip East they hitch-hiked from Chicago.

Two of the men, John Blanchette and Lawrence M. Pool, became so ill here that they could not continue to Washington. Transportation to Chicago was provided for them by the Greater Pittsburgh Chapter No. 8, of the Disabled American Veterans.

PUBLIC WORK FUNDS ARE AVAILABLE

McKeesport, With $100,000, Among Nine Communities Prepared; More to Report

More than $186,000 is available in nine cities, boroughs and townships for material and equipment to be used on public improvements, the Allegheny County Emergency Association has announced, after receiving the first replies to 122 telegrams asking what funds were available for material and equipment, providing the association supplies and pays the laborers.

The replies were from communities outside Pittsburgh. Officials of more than 25 districts said the plan has received approval in their communities, and the extent to which they will be able to co-operate will be decided by officials this week.

M'KEESPORT READY

Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport, reported his city has approximately $100,000 available for public improvements. He said:

"McKeesport is willing and ready to do its part."

Robert B. Dell, city engineer Duquesne, reported that $26,[illegible] already is available for contemplated street improvements [illegible] that more money probably can be provided. Improvements will include the grading and paving of Kennedy avenue, estimated to cost $18,125; the grading and paving of Priscilla avenue, $5,850, and the construction of a storm sewer in Priscilla and Dixon alley, $2,635.

TOWNSHIPS HAVE FUNDS

Collier Township has $22,500 available for road construction, J. Scott Walker, its road commission secretary, announced. In Shaler Township $15,000 is on hand for supplies and equipment for outside work, Malcolm C. Smith township secretary, informed the association. Smith said the Ogshaw Presbyterian Church supply $600 for materials to pa its interior if the labor is pr vided.

H. D. Caldwell, borough secretary of Swissvale, said $9,000 is ready for purchase of material and equipment for public improvements. Lee Township has $3,000 for the purpose, H. L. Crawford, ownship secretary, said. S. H. Noll, secretary of Baldwin Township, said $3,000 will be available April 1, and East McKeesport has a fund of $2,000, according to R. C. Beswick, borough clerk.

Although Versailles has planned no improvement program this year because of lack of funds, Robert A. Jack, secretary, said the borough probably could borrow approximately $10,000 for street improvements.

CORPORATION DONORS

Officials of the emergency association announced another list of corporations that have donated to the fund. They follow:

M. Bonn Company, Crowther, Mohler & Gardner, Federated Metals Corporation, Goldbury & Roberts, the Hostetter Company, Kennywood Park Corporation, W. W. Lawrence & Co., Penn-Ohio Gas Company, Pennsylvania Door & Sash Company, Pittsburgh Tube Company, Russell, Burdsall & Ward Bolt & Nut Company, South Hills Oil & Gas Company, Tasa Coal Company, Peoples Natural Gas Company, Commonwealth Real Estate Company, Jenkins Arcade Company and Crucible Steel Company of America.

These banks are also listed as donors:

Commonwealth Trust Company of Pittsburgh, Colonial Trust Company, Duquesne National Bank, Exchange National Bank of Pittsburgh, Farmers Deposit National Bank, Fidelity Title & Trust Company, Fifth Avenue Bank of Pittsburgh, First National Bank at Pittsburgh, First National Bank of Wilkinsburg, Forbes National Bank, Fourteenth Street Bank, Keystone National Bank, Mellon National Bank Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, Potter Title & Trust Company, Potter Title and Mortgage Guarantee Company, Second National Bank of Allegheny, Union National Bank of Pittsburgh, Union Savings Bank of Pittsburgh, Washington Trust Company of Pittsburgh and Western Savings & Deposit Bank.

In the store group Kaufmann's department store was listed.

PITT STUDENTS HEAR NOTED SOCIALISTS

J. S. Wilson, Norman Thomas Speak on Social Problems; Comment on City, Dry Law

J. Stitt Wilson, former Socialist mayor of Berkeley, Cal., spoke to students at the University of Pittsburgh Sunday, Monday and today, during a campus conference under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. at Pitt.

The conference was arranged for students to study the "shortcomings and crucial points of our social order." Wilson, formerly associated with Ramsay MacDonald in Labor party activities in England, spoke consecutively on the "Significance of Our Social Problems," "The Social Contributions of Religion" and the "Technique of Creative Living."

NORMAN THOMAS SPEAKS

Today, in a public forum in Memorial Hall, Wilson and Norman Thomas, Socialist and associate editor of "The Nation," discussed the question, "Is Human Nature Hopeless?"

Commenting on the Shrader-Dague execution yesterday, Wilson said:

"Capital punishment is a relic of barbarism. I do not think taking a life is any answer to crime."

About prohibition he said:

"I'm sad about prohibition. Something will have to be done to deal with the curse of the liquor traffic."

Pittsburgh impresses Wilson as being:

"One more sample of our colossal industrial cities where unemployment is the tragic rebuke to our great social and economic injustice."

He said:

HITS ECONOMIC SYSTEM

"Our present economic system is destroying the possibility of private property for the multitudes of people and concentrating enormous sources of property in the hands of a few."

His solution for what he believes to be this evil is government regulation of markets, unemployment insurance, taking the necessities of life out of the hands of gamblers and exploiters, and organization by the people of co-operative, distributive institutions to sell the products of labor to themselves at cost.

BOARD PUSHES BILL TO BAN FIREWORKS

Township Commissioners Get Squire's Partial Payment For Fines Not Remitted

Taxes in Mt. Lebanon will be lower this year, the township commissioners having reduced the millage from 10 to 9½ at a meeting last night.

The commissioners gave two readings to an ordinance prohibiting the sale or discharge of fireworks in the township. The bill was introduced at the suggestion of the Mt. Lebanon Women's Club.

A check for $165 was presented the commissioners by Justice of the Peace Ira M. Edmundson for unremitted fines in 1925, 1926 and 1927. Auditors had claimed Edmundson owed the township $508, but the amount was reduced to $205 after a conference with Solicitor Samuel Schreiner. Fines for 1928 and 1929 remain to be collected.

G. J. Irwin, former township manager, through Fire Chief James E. Wood, gave the commissioners a check for $250, representing the outstanding balance from the recent firemen's and policemen's carnival, for which Irwin served as treasurer.

The commissioners set March 9 for a public hearing on a rezoning ordinance for Washington road and Municipal way.

MAY HELP YOU TO HAVE BETTER TEETH

THERE are so many different dentifrices, so many conflicting theories, that it would scarcely be strange if you sometimes wonder if you really are taking the most effective care of your teeth.

Yet, it really isn't such a complicated question. Dentists overwhelmingly agree that one type of dentifrice is the most effective. A prominent research institution made an investigation among 50,000 practicing dentists. Here is the summary of the replies received:

95% of the answers stated that germ acids most frequently cause tooth decay and gum irritation;

95% agreed that the most serious trouble occurs at the place where teeth and gums meet;

85% stated that the best product to prevent these acids from causing decay and irritating the gums is Milk of Magnesia.

Isn't this, indeed, convincing evidence that Squibb Dental Cream will protect your teeth and gums? For it is made with more than 50% Squibb Milk of Magnesia.

Squibb's is a thoroughly safe dentifrice. It contains no grit, no astringent, nothing which might injure. It cleans effectively and it soothes and refreshes the mouth. Use it morning and night.

EFFORTS RENEWED TO REACH GOAL IN JEWISH FUND DRIVE

Oppenheimer Spurs Teams To Get Larger Donations As Time Limit Draws Near

With three-fourths of their campaign time elapsed and but slightly more than half the funds raised, volunteer workers in the $450,000 campaign for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies today were renewing efforts to raise the entire amount.

At yesterday's report luncheon in the William Penn Hotel it was announced $75,265 had been raised over the week-end, bringing the total to date to $233,232.90. Raymond M. Kaufmann presided and Charles Dreifus and A. M. Oppenheimer spoke. Among pledges reported was one from Paul Block, newspaper publisher, who sent $1,000 to Oliver M. Kaumann, division leader.

The funds being raised are to carry on the welfare work of the federation for another year. Seventeen social agencies are affiliated with the federation. Oppenheimer, general chairman of the campaign, in his address at the luncheon said:

"There has been evident a state of mind which justified luxury and self-indulgence. The present crisis has brought many of us to our senses. We realize that our stay in this world is short and that there are other things of value. Now we have been brought to understand that there are certain duties that we must shoulder.

"There is a certain group, however, which has evaded this responsibility. There are at least 2,000 Jewish men and women who could give $50 more to the federation than they do, and if this were done the federation would gain more than $100,000."

TWO LECTURES SCHEDULED AT FOOD SHOW

Member of Bakers' Group Speaks on Bread-Making; $10 Prize for Attendance

Two lectures which hold unusual interest for women were scheduled for this afternoon's program of the Food Show, at Motor Square Garden. Dr. Thomas Faes, of the Western Pennsylvania Bakers' Association, was to speak on "The Chemistry of Baking," stressing the science of bread making. Another afternoon speaker was Miss Josephine B. Gibson, of Pittsburgh, who will also talk this evening.

At attractive feature of the show has been the $10 cash prize which is awarded every afternoon by the grocers for the largest representation by women's clubs at the afternoon sessions of the home economics class. Clubs entering are furnished afternoon passes for members. The Sequela Club of the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church won the prize yesterday.

Liquor Laden Auto Crashes; Seek Driver

The owner of an automobile which crashed into another machine at Aiken avenue and Walnut street late yesterday, was being sought by police today.

The driver fled, and when police arrived they reported finding eight burlap bags filled with whisky in the machine. Through the license tags police learned the owner resided in Lawrenceville.

Civic Club Sponsors Pitt Play 'What's Up'

"What's Up," the University of Pittsburgh's 1931 production, to be given on Monday evening, April 20 at the Nixon Theater, will be sponsored by the Civic Club of Allegheny County. The general chairman is Mrs. H. Alien Machesney who will be assisted by Mrs. William Thaw and Mrs. Franc Guthrie.

FLAMES ROUT 6 IN SOUTH SIDE

Fire in the plant of the Pennsylvania Extract Manufacturing Company, 2008-12 Carson street, at noon today drove six persons from the structure. Two alarms were sounded.

Ralph Sachs, treasurer of the company, and N. Neiberg, customer, detected smoke and sounded the first alarm. Frank E. Louis and wife, occupyng the second floor, and Mrs. Sophia Clarey, 58, and James Sullivan, 44, and his son Robert, 18, occupants of the third floor at 2008, were driven to the street.

Firemen found the source of the flames in the basement, used for storage purposes. Fire Chief Riichard L. Smith said damage amounted to $3,500. Reuben Schnoff, president of the company, was unable to explain the cause of the fire.

MAN WOUNDED BY BANDIT DIES

A garage watchman's bravery had cost him his life today.

William McClintock, 35, of 7924 Susquehanna street, a night watchman at the R. H. Schmitt Company garage, of 7827 Hamilton avenue, who pursued a bandit after he had been held up and robbed of 60 cents and an automobile Sunday night, and who was shot in the abdomen during a chase which ended at Braddock and Hamilton avenues, died this morning in the Pittsburgh Hospital.

School Children To Get Bird Test

Public school children will be given a quiz on birds before members of the Audubon Society, Wednesday evening in the educational room of Carnegie Museum.

"It takes more than a New Frock to give you REAL POISE" says Dorothy Dix

DOROTHY DIX, famous writer on women's problems

"EVER since Eve discovered fig leaves, the best tonic for a woman's self-confidence has been—pretty CLOTHES!

"A colorful new frock—my, how it sets a girl up! But—and here is what some girls forget—it takes more than a new frock to give you real poise.

"Others may not know whether your LINGERIE is pretty and colorful and fresh, but YOU do. When it is—when you know that underneath, as well as on the surface, you're exquisite—you FEEL charming . . . Confident . . . Ready to conquer the world!

"Why not try these 2 simple rules:

1. Buy the loveliest lingerie you can.
2. Never let it get faded and drab looking.

"I wish I could make you feel how important this is! It's one of the secrets of every truly fascinating woman.

"Yet it's easy to manage even on small salaries. You know about LUX, I'm sure—I find that delicate pastel lingerie wears so long washed in Lux that it's not a bit extravagant. By 'long' I mean literally for YEARS. Lux—unlike the ordinary 'good' soaps—is made to preserve COLOR and CHARM.

"YOUR SURROUNDINGS, too, can help give you poise! When everything in your home—from pretty curtains to the colorful linens on your dinner table—is dainty and new looking, you feel confident, at ease. Here, too, Lux is your invaluable aid."

Dorothy Dix

NO. 6 OF A SERIES OF ADVERTISEMENTS ON THE STORY OF OLIVER TWIST

Original George Cruikshank Illustration through Courtesy of The Houghton Mifflin Company

"Why don't you put yourself under Fagin, Oliver?" asked Bates

Fagin, the wily old scoundrel, once more tried to break Oliver's determination not to be a thief. First he kept the boy alone in the gloom of the thieves' den until any company was preferable to that of his own sad thoughts. Then he arranged that Oliver should be constantly with his most desperate and hardened pupils, Bates and the Dodger. And while Oliver was compelled to clean their boots and otherwise act as their slave, these two young criminals poisoned his mind and wooed him into the service of Fagin by threats, scorn, pursuasion and promises. Poor Oliver! Fate seemed to have dealt him a losing hand!

Stop the Haller Man today and try the new, better bread . . the OLIVER TWIST

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Folk, College Set 'First Nighters' Throng Theaters

Pittsburgh thronged to the theaters last night, attracted by "Michael and Mary" at the Alvin and "Making Mary" at the Nixon. And at the Alvin, by the way, were many gaily gowned college girls, for the Women's Scholarship Organization of Carnegie Tech gave a benefit.

And of course society was there. Chatting in the [illegible] during intermission was [illegible] popular debutante Elizabeth McKay, daughter of the [illegible] McKays, looking charming in a seafoam green satin gown fashioned with a peri semi-princess and a short of black net. The same group was petite Frances Burke in a graceful black lace gown.

Capacity House

Nancy Brown, daughter of Mrs. Charles M. Brown of Woodland road, chose a [illegible] gown of black velvet with pearls banding the neckline and the short sleeves. Virginia Drew Wright looked pretty in a dinner gown of black velvet having long sleeves and a skirt reaching to the floor.

Others I noticed were Mrs. William Maclay Hall, who, attired with her daughter Priscilla, Mrs. Hall chose black velvet and a wrap of garnet red velvet, and Priscilla wore a bronze brocaded wrap.

In spite of the benefit at the Alvin last night, the Nixon, where "Making Mary" is being presented, was filled to capacity. I saw Mrs. Alan S. Humphreys as she entered the house, wearing black georgette with a red velvet wrap. The James Francis Burkes were there, too, with their daughter, Mrs. Francis Burke Rogers. Mrs. Burke wore a gown of black chiffon and lace, and her daughter chose deep rubystone velvet with a tiered skirt. Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins chose claret red velvet for her costume with a matching velvet wrap furred with white fox.

I noticed Rebecca George, too, wearing coral pink satin, with a black velvet coat.

I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Samuel Harden Church, too, in an ermine coat, and I noticed Mrs. George Wilmer III chatting with Mrs. John Smith, and Mrs. Wilmer had chosen powder blue lace and Mrs. Smith powder blue crepe with a novel V-decolletage bordered with a wide band of the same material. Mrs. Edward Purcell Mellon II was regal in cherry red crepe with a black velvet and white fox wrap.

The Simon T. Pattersons were in the audience, too, with Mrs. Patterson in black satin with a knee-length wrap of black velvet and ermine. Mrs. Wallace Hurtle Rowe, Jr., was gowned in black lace with a black velvet jacket.

I had a glimpse of Mrs. George H. Love in wine red velvet with a mink coat, and of Mary Mellon McClung in pecru lace, with a narrow cape collar.

Gay Hues Popular

Smoking in the foyer were the junior H. H. McClintics with Mrs. McClintic in scintillating black satin. Mrs. Herbert A. May in black velvet and Mrs. Arthur P. Woolfolk in rose georgette.

Mrs. James McKay chose black crepe for her gown with a black velvet and white fox wrap. Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland was there, too. Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Jones III were chatting in the foyer and Mrs. Jones was wearing black crepe and a black velvet finger-tip jacket. Mrs. Dorwin J. Donnelly was chatting with the Burkes, and she was wearing a coat of black caracul.

Mrs. R. Kent Hanson was charming in Alice blue crepe and Mrs. William A. Duckham, who was with Mrs. Duckham, wore black velvet with a shoulder corsage of orchids and a wrap of black velvet and white fox.

CLUB NOTES

An exceptionally distinguished group of speakers will give the Monday morning lectures at the Twentieth Century Club next month. S. K. Ratcliffe, always a favorite with the club, who was with the Calcutta Statesman, for five years, will lecture next Monday on "India." He will be followed on the ninth by Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, famous explorer, who will have "Flying the Ends of the Earth" as his subject.

Guglielmo Ferrero, Italian historian, comes on March 16 to speak on "The Problem of War—Suppression or Limitation." Next comes Louis Untermeyer, American poet, to talk on "A Critic's Half Holiday" and the month will be rounded out by Dame Rachel Crowdy, noted Englishwoman, who will discuss "International Aspects of Social Reform" on the thirtieth.

Modernism in architecture is the outgrowth of the machine age, Harvey Wiley Corbett, distinguished American architect, told the club yesterday. Modernism was compared with the accepted architectural standards of 50 years ago, Mr. Corbett concluding that it is now considered best to build with the rational, practical point of view.

Skyscrapers, Mr. Corbett said, have been built not because of lack of ground space, but through American genius for convenience. Through such concentration of office space it is possible to keep 15 appointments in New York within the same space of time that it takes for three in London, he said.

Mrs. Oliver S. Heck was hostess to the Monday Club of Carnegie yesterday in the Y. W. C. A. Papers on "Women in International Affairs," "Women Organized for Peace" and "America's Part in the World War" were read by Mrs. John F. Zug, Mrs. J. H. Mulvey and Mrs. Jennie Henry. Soprano solos were contributed by Mrs. Regina Spilker Linn, Mrs. J. H. Sanford accompanying.

Members of College Club To Entertain Parties At Benefit Play

The demand for first floor seats for the College Club's benefit next Monday night has been so heavy that many of the club members have given up their orchestra seats and will entertain parties in the balcony. Among these hostesses will be Mrs. Cornelius D. Scully, Mrs. J. Hartley Anderson, Mrs. J. Brooks Huff, Mrs. R. E. Somers, Miss Marie Craighead, Mrs. R. C. Cochran, Mrs. Charles Reitell, Mrs. James M. Graham, Mrs. George W. Stewart, Mrs. Earl Collins, Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, Miss Mary Caulfield, Miss Ella Endlish, Mrs. D. D. Pendleton and Mrs. Harvey Salt. A group of Syracuse University and another of Mt. Holyoke alumnae will make up other parties. The benefit is to be "The First Mrs. Fraser," at the Alvin.

A program somewhat out of the ordinary was prepared by the senior Homewood Women's Club members for the entertainment of their guests, the juniors, last night in Homewood Carnegie Library. Elsie Johns Wright, in colonial costume, gave a group of old fashioned songs with Miss Helen Thomas at the piano and, in camp costume, Mrs. Wright later added a group of out-of-doors songs. Old photographs of the seniors were thrown on the screen and there were movies of the members taken at last year's senior luncheon and of Mrs. Elgin A. Hill's family and guests at "Hillcrest," their mountain home.

Now polish silverware without rubbing

BY MARY LEE WORK

A new quick way to CLEAN silver; to make two other jobs easy

There is now a simple new way that cleans silver without rubbing—and yet makes it look as if a professional silversmith had cleaned it! You don't even touch a cloth to it—just immerse it in a pan of water a few minutes. In this way, you clean all your table silver in an instant—clean a complete silver service just as quickly. It is a preparation called Climalene that you get for 10c a package (12-oz.) at any grocery store. Use according to directions below.

It makes many other hard jobs easier—removes bathtub ring without rubbing—cuts dishwashing time in half.

Thousands of women are using it now. It saves hours of work for them every day. Try it—these three ways.

To Clean Silver Without Rubbing

Add one teaspoonful of Climalene to 2 qts. of water in an aluminum pan. Immerse the silver—bring it to a boil. Then rinse silver and wipe it dry. That is all. All signs of tarnish disappear. Even the most intricate and highly embossed silver patterns are perfectly cleaned.

To Avoid Faded, Gray Washings

Use 2 tablespoonfuls of Climalene and ¼ the usual amount of soap. Clothes emerge soft, spotless, utterly without fading. For soap fade and soap eat are ended this way. In recent tests, men's blue shirts were washed 75 times, without noticeable fade; sheerest French hosiery 100 times and more—to prove the blandness of this way.

Banish Bathtub Ring

Add a tablespoonful of Climalene to your bath water. It makes the water soft as summer rain. Soap makes a quick, rich lather. After the bath—just rinse the tub. That is all. There just isn't any "high-water" mark. No scrubbing; no rubbing.

Why It Cleans

Climalene instantly takes all the harshness out of Lake water, medium hard water, and hard water. Makes it soft and gentle as rain water. So soft it does the work with ¼ the soap you now use. At the same time, due to certain bland cleansing agents, it instantly DISSOLVES all grease, dirt and grime, and thus cuts your working time ½ or more, in washing, cleaning and in the dishpan.

DESIGNERS SAY IF IT'S IN PRINT IT'S CORRECT

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 24.—If it's in print, you may depend on it to be correct—so far as the mode is concerned, anyhow. For once again the frock of printed crepe or chiffon emerges in all its importance to take its place as a leading contender for sartorial honors. At all winter resorts, whether they be situated in Switzerland or Quebec, Nice or Palm Beach, one hears of the smartest and most-fashion-wise women wearing fascinating frocks of printed chiffon. These prints seem to be mainly floral designs with the small neat single blossom pattern quite to the fore.

BUT NO DOUBT as the season advances, the large prints splashy or indefinite will again bloom. In the meantime there is much of interest to be noted in the new printed frocks which retain all their old charm combined with new verve and freshness. And so, most likely those of you who absolutely decided not to wear another printed chiffon this year will quickly repent this rash decision when the new models pass before your appraising eye. For several new ideas have been incorporated in the new models.

OF COURSE even with the advent of prints, the solid fabric still retains its importance especially when it is employed for a frock by Vionnet, done in the inimitable manner of this brilliant couturiere. Shown today is a sketch of one of her new frocks done in the ice-white satin that she likes so well. This particular model has the bodice drawn around to the back so that it appears to be knotted with a huge bow with looped up ends which unite with the bodice again below the waistline. Three sloping pieces of the fabric form the skirt, the lowest of which trails slightly in divided points in back.

AND NOW for Molyneux's printed chiffon evening frock designed for his Riviera collection and one being shown at Cannes. The print is a delicate small flower pattern combining pale shades of yellow, rose and green on a lighter ground. The flounced peplum is intricately shirred in swirls at the top and there is a severely tailored belt with a jewelled buckle. An accompanying scarf of the same material has a cluster of primroses at the center. These are worn against the throat or on the shoulder, according to the arrangement of the scarf and the taste of the wearer.

MANY ILLS ARE DUE TO FATIGUE

Common Cold Is Very Easy "To Catch" When "Tired Out"

Fatigue, according to medical authorities, lowers the resistance of the human system. As a result, the system is more susceptible to infections. For example, when fatigued, the body is easily chilled and often a head cold or worse follows.

One of the most effective ways to overcome fatigue is to eat or drink something sweet. A soda fountain beverage, ice cream, a piece of candy and small cakes are appropriate because they are quickly digested and their energy is ready at once to restore vigor.

Thousands of people who work, or spend the day shopping, have learned the value of a mid-afternoon sweet snack to banish fatigue. Children upon coming home from school are also benefited by a light, nutritious sweet food. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with sugar, The Sugar Institute.

Willing to Sacrifice All For Foot Troops as Germans Press On organizations that were absolutely necessary in the SOS and finally, that the restriction of our shipments to infantry and machine gun units would be a very dangerous and short-sighted policy.

To much of this he paid little or no attention, and replied that all these things could be postponed.

Mr. Graeme Thompson, British expert on transportation and supply, came into the room at this point with Mr. Lloyd George and Gen. Sir Henry Wilson, and took part in the discussion.

Sir Henry

Mr. Thompson said with emphasis that it would be a very serious mistake not to send over 15,000 men to repair rolling stock and otherwise build up our rail transportation system, and he went on to describe the run-down condition of the railways.

His views seemed to have no more effect on the French attitude than if they had not been uttered. The fact is, as already stated elsewhere, that none of the French officials had more than a vague conception of the tremendous difficulties of our problem.

Shortage of Ready Men

At this stage it was necessary to confess that this emergency had not been foreseen and that it would be impossible for us to ship over as many infantry and machine gun troops as the Allies wished, because June 30 we should have left at home only 90,000 of such troops with the necessary training.

Gen. Foch used this as the basis of criticism of our organization, asserting that we did not have enough infantry in proportion to other troops, failing entirely to appreciate our requirements for the service of supply and transportation and for the artillery, engineers and other combat troops as well.

It is pertinent to remark here that notwithstanding my urgent recommendations for a large increase in the number of drafts, the War Department continued up to May 1 to call out only an average of 116,000 per month. Consequently, the supply of trained men had run short in an emergency that required the shipment of 250,000 to 300,000 per month.

Continuing the conference, Mr. Lloyd George said he thought President Wilson would be deeply interested to get Gen. Foch's view of the situation, and added that as America had no prime minister present, he thought it would be inconvenient for us to make a decision, but that this subject should be brought before the whole Council.

I then called attention to a cable from Secretary of War Baker already quoted, showing that the President had been very much embarrassed by representations made to him personally by the French and British ambassadors, and had suggested that the matter might be settled by a conference between Gen. Foch and myself.

Foch Insistent

I pointed out that the cable did not mention the Supreme War Council, and I again stated my opposition to making the subject one of general discussion by all Allied representatives and their staffs.

I did not fail to point out further that the President was trusting my judgment in this matter. As nothing was being accomplished, and hoping the number of participants in the discussion might be limited, I proposed we adjourn until the following day.

The next afternoon, when we assembled, M. Clemenceau was waiting for the rest of us, and instead of there being fewer conferees the number had increased. Not unlike the situation at Abbeville a month before, everybody was keyed up, and, as we had expected, the question had to be fought all over again.

Gen. Foch, supported by M. Clemenceau and Lloyd George, wanted nothing but infantry and machine gunners in June and July, to which I was strongly opposed, again insisting that sufficient importance had not been attached to my reasons for the necessity of the auxiliary troops omitted in June.

Other objections, which the Allies apparently overlooked, were that the untrained men called out in May could not possibly be ready for service until a considerable time after arrival, and that neither the French nor the British could provide all the equipment and land transportation they would need.

Ask for Rookies

In accordance with my program, I was willing to agree to the shipment of fully trained infantry not needed for the instruction of new drafts, but felt that this point should be left to the judgment of the Secretary of War.

Mr. Lloyd George then concluded that as a consequence July would be a blank, and in a rather dejected tone he said the Allies were in a sense in the hands of the United States. He spoke of the generous and chivalrous attitude of President Wilson, and said all they could do was to acquaint him with their needs and call upon him to come to their aid, more particularly to the aid of French, at the period of the most terrible extremity that she had yet encountered.

Mr. Lloyd George proposed that we should even bring over men that were partially instructed, as he thought they would learn faster in the atmosphere of war. I said we could not strip the country of every man with any sort of training, as we should then be back where we had started in 1917, and I argued that all men sent over should have at least three months training if at all possible. Whereupon M. Clemenceau asked what would become of the war in the interval.

I remarked that the discussion had become complicated, but that it was my hope the greatest possible number of troops, including artillery and auxiliary combat troops and those needed for railways and ports, should be transported.

Gen. Weygand

I tried to make our needs understood, and appealed to Gens. Foch and Weygand, who, as soldiers, I said, could not fail to recognize the difficulties we had to surmount, not only in training our citizen army but in building up a complete system of supply in a foreign country.

Pershing Disapproves

I well knew, however, that neither of them, in their extreme desire for American replacements, had taken these questions into serious consideration, nor had they considered the deficiencies in our organization caused by concessions of the last few months.

The British problems being similar to ours, though less difficult, the views of Mr. Thompson were more to the point. He had plainly said it was impossible to assure the proper handling of an army without adequate rail and port facilities. Lord Milner agreed, and said he thought he fully understood my problems.

M. Clemenceau reverted to the shortage of available men in the United States, saying he had thought our resources inexhaustible, and wanted to know when the shipments would be resumed.

As he had evidently not followed the discussion, he was informed that shipments in general would, of course, be continued to the full capacity of tonnage, and that the men we had called out in May would be available in August. He agreed with Mr. Lloyd George that President Wilson ought to be advised of the Allies situation.

Mr. Lloyd George read a proposed message to the President that 170,000 infantry and machine gun units, without regard to training, be sent in both June and July out of a possible 250,000 in each month, leaving transportation for a total of 160,000 of the categories desired by me.

General Foch proposed that the message be sent and Lord Milner appealed for an agreement, but I could not agree to bringing troops with only one month's training.

I called attention to the fact that we were being importuned on one hand to send over nothing but replacements for Allied divisions to the utter neglect of our own military forces, and on the other we were being pressed to furnish thousands of men for their technical services.

Upholds Authority

Moreover, it had already been demonstrated by the experience of our units that the Allies were not prepared to supply our men with either equipment or accustomed food. I insisted that auxiliary and service troops be sent to build up our own organization in preference to the shipment of uninstructed troops, who could not fight when they arrived, and suggested that the July program be postponed until August.

Clemenceau remarked that the German would not postpone his attacks, to which I replied that we could not rely on untrained men in battle.

It was here that Mr. Lloyd George read a proposition which set forth the critical situation requiring the concentration of reserves in front of Paris and the urgent necessity of finding other troops to replace the French divisions taken from the British front.

He drew attention particularly to the opinion expressed by Gen. Foch that the Allies would be defeated unless the number of British divisions could be maintained. He then proposed as a solution that the British commander-in-chief should determine when the American troops with his armies had acquired sufficient training to be placed in the line.

This meant that such troops would become replacements, and it was impossible for me to make such a concession. I rather vigorously stated that this was a prerogative and a responsibility I would not relinquish under any circumstances.

I said this was not the Council's business, but that every consideration would be given by me to any urgent request from Gen. Foch for our troops, trained or untrained.

MARSHAL FOCH

Allied Leaders Argue

Reading from notes, and appealing to me, Gen. Foch then proposed that a request be made on the United States for a total of 100 combat divisions to be sent over at the rate of 300,000 a month. I said that in my opinion we would send as many men as possible, and that our people would not fail to raise an army of the necessary size.

M. Clemenceau asked how many divisions it would be possible for the British to maintain in France, to which Mr. Lloyd George replied with some sarcasm that it would be best to postpone the question until the return of the French expert whom M. Clemenceau had promised to send to England.

Then Gen. Foch took the cue and went on to say that we found ourselves with 150 Allied divisions opposed to 204 German, that if the number could not be maintained we should fail, and that whatever might be the report of the expert there ought to be the strongest resolve by the British government to keep up its divisions.

Disaster would be inevitable, he said, if they were unable to maintain the fifty-three British divisions, and it would be impossible to continue the war in the name of the Allies against an enemy whose effectives increased while ours diminished.

The whole discussion was very erratic, as one of the Allies would take exception to nearly every statement made by the other.

Mr. Lloyd George said here that he couldn't understand why all the losses fell to the Allies and none to the Germans. Then came a lively tilt between the British and French, Lord Milner taking direct issue as to the figures. He showed that the Allies really had 169 divisions and not 150.

Of the 169 divisions on the Western Front at this time, Lord Milner pointed out, 161 were French, two Italian, four American, 11 Belgian and 51 British, besides two British that were reduced to mere skeletons. These numbers had been variously stated according to which side was speaking.

FOUNDERS WEEK

Another milestone has been reached in the progress of the world's greatest food distributors. The past year has been one of unusual achievement in bringing down the cost of hundreds of everyday food necessities, and to commemorate the memory of the Founder every A&P store in the country is offering an attractive array of foods at unusually low prices, presenting an opportunity to replenish your supplies at very substantial savings.

(Personal)

Experience is said to be an expensive teacher. But the A&P has learned from years of experience how to eliminate waste in buying, shipping, and retailing food. That is why A&P is able to sell the best food at the lowest prices.

Experience in this case, at least, has charged but little for its lessons.

Whole Wheat BREAD 16-oz loaf 5c

One of the greatest values A&P has ever offered to the consuming public. Serve whole wheat side by side with white bread at every meal; it's very beneficial to the health.

ELIS NOT TO ADOPT ROCKNE ATTACK

YALE ISN'T GOING to use anybody's football system except her own, according to Coach Mal Stevens, who gives out that information in denying that the Blue's offense next fall will be the same as that used by Notre Dame. When Benny Friedman, former Michigan star and long recognized as the country's greatest forward passer, was recently named to join Stevens and Adam Walsh, coaching the Eli varsity, and Bucky O'Connor was appointed freshman mentor, it was reported that the Bulldogs would adopt the Irish attack.

Mal Stevens

Stevens says the rumor was without foundation. He points out that if a team uses wing backs it is said to play the wing-back system, and that if it plays the unbalanced line it is said to be playing the Warner system. The Elis will play the balanced line without shifts, he announces. In short, he says, it will be the Yale system and nothing else, adding that Yale has built up a football coaching system and that the Yale team will play it.

BENNY FRIEDMAN [illegible] all nonsense [illegible] but you'll [illegible] Albie Booth to come skipping off [illegible]

"And somebody always tipped off even that play, too. If the fullback hiked back, the enemy knew a reverse was coming. And our double reverse didn't give them anything to worry about, either. I can't describe the changes. But it will be the old Yale stuff remodeled."

"BOOTH [illegible] adds. "He can run the ball much better when he doesn't have the responsibility of running the team. Last year he will give his entire attention to playing halfback, instead of calling the signals. Booth will not do the forward passing, either. His pass [illegible] ing, but he's not really the man to throw the forwards.

"Albie is under a tremendous handicap at passing, on account of his size. You'd be surprised how hard it is for a little fellow to pick out his receiver. He has to loop the ball over the heads of the incoming linemen, too much also, and that increases the danger of interception."

THOUGH THE NEW baseball is intended to reduce hitting, some batters actually will be helped by it. They are the chop hitters who dropped their natural style against the lively ball in recent years in order to take a full swing at it. Jean Dubuc, the old pitcher, says Roy Johnson, of the Tigers, is one of them. Dubuc holds that Johnson is not cut out for a swinging hitter and never would be a regular in the .300 class by taking a full cut at the ball. Against the lively pill, Johnson did not get a chance to chop, but had to swing trying to get somewhere. He did not get far by swinging, but now he can chop, and Dubuc believes he will go a long way at that style.

Jake Schaefer

WITHOUT JAKE SCHAEFER in the competing field, the so-called world championship 18.2 balkline billiard tournament, which opened in New York yesterday under the auspices of the newly formed Federation of Billiard Players, suggests the New York Yankees without Babe Ruth.

They're declaring Schaefer's title vacated because he is affiliated with the National Billiard Association and declined to enter the players' tourney, but the fact remains that he is not only still the world champion but holds all the world records at 18.2 against which the entrants in the present tournament are playing.

ONE OF THESE records is a run of 400 from spot made against Eric Hagenlacher in 1925. A second is his incidental best game average of 400. Another is his grand average of 57.14.100 made the same year. Jake also holds the challenge-match high-run record of 432.

At that, there is a lot of class to the New York tourney. Of the four participants, all except Kinrey Matsuyama have held the world 18.2 honors. Willie Hoppe was champion in 1908, 1910 to 1921, then again in 1922, 1923 and early in 1927. Hagenlacher won the crown from Schaefer in a challenge match in 1926 and Cochran was the winner of the 1927 championship tournament.

ON PAPER THE 10-round bout between Mickey Walker and Johnny Risko in Miami tonight looks like a certain victory for Walker. The only wonder is that any matchmaker would use it as a feature event again after the recent meeting of the same two men in Detroit, in which Walker won all the way. It isn't a matter of age or wear, as Walker is two and half years older than Risko and has been fighting three years longer, but Risko, though 25 pounds heavier class, never was within miles of Walker's standard, and besides has lost a lot of what he once possessed.

THERE IS HARDLY a doubt now that Pittsburgh will figure in the play-offs for the hockey championship of the International League. In fact there never has been much doubt in the minds of those who have noted the form of the Yellow Jackets and the spirit backing it up since their last defeat on February 3. It has been only a question of how high they would go before the finish.

As far as qualifying a club for the play-offs is concerned, fourth place is as good as third, and the Jackets are now in berth No. 3, so that they could afford to slip one notch and still be in the hunt. But if they move in any direction it is more likely to be upward, as they have not been defeated in their last nine games, a league record for the season, and show no sign of letting down.

THERE IS AT least one ball player in the big leagues willing to gamble on his own future. The athlete with that much confidence in himself is Gus Mancuso, Italian catcher of the Cardinals.

The St. Louis club offered Mancuso a three-year contract at a certain salary. Gus turned it down cold yesterday and signed an agreement for only one year. He is pressed to hustle for a raise in 1932 and take his chances, and that's the spirit that makes winning ball players.

C. V. Whitney

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT WHITNEY'S Equipoise, if he wins the Kentucky Derby this year, will be the twenty-eighth favorite to capture the classic in 57 runnings. In Tom Kearney's future book, Equipoise is installed favorite at 4 to 1 straight, 2 to 1 place, and even money show. Twenty Grand, of the Greentree Stable, is second choice at 6 to 1, 3 to 1, and 3 to 2. The odds are 10 to 1 against Mate and Insco, 20 to 1 against Epithet, Don Leon, Siskin, Vander Pool and Knight's Call, and 30 to 1 against Ormesby, Tarpaulin, Surf Board, Happy Scot, Barometer, Don Pedro and Oswego. Whitney horses have won the Derby twice. The late Harry Payne Whitney's Regret, the only filly ever to win the event, was first in 1915, and Whiskery scored in 1927.

COACH LIKELY TO REPLACE M'DONALD

By JESS CARVER.

The stage is set for the return of John Lawther to Westminster College as director of athletics, head coach of football and assistant coach of basketball. Glenn "Babe" O'Donovan, star forward of the Titan quintets of 1927, '28, '29 and '30, will assist Lawther with the gridders and be chief mentor in basketball.

John Lawther

The above information has been secured by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph from a source considered extremely authentic. The reorganized athletic council, which is to hold a meeting next week, is at present set on making the aforementioned moves, and unless the members do a complete about face, the plans outlined here will be carried out.

A. A. McDonald, present graduate manager of athletics, is to be replaced by Lawther as athletic director, and McDonald will be shifted to the position of alumni secretary. Robert X. Graham, director of publicity, will be retained as varsity track and cross-country coach.

RESIGNED LAST YEAR

Lawther resigned the basketball coaching job at Westminster at the close of the 1930 season. He has been coaching football and basketball at Freeport (L. I.) High School since, with the same fine success that attended his efforts at Westminster, from December of 1926, when he took over the head-coaching job, fired four of the five varsity players until the close of last year's campaign. During the four years Lawther had his team either first or second in the Tri-State Conference, and developed such players as Ken Delahunty, Red Clowell, Tudor Lewis, Bob Ayers and O'Donovan, now slated to become his assistant.

Differences between himself and President Wallace, who recently has resigned, caused Lawther to throw up his job last spring.

Three weeks ago, Dyke Beede, former Carnegie Tech grid star, announced that he would not seek a new contract as football coach, after spending seven years as head coach, and last Saturday Lawrence (Pops) Harrison, who took over Lawther's job this year, tendered his resignation.

REFUSE COMMENT

"Things have been more or less up in the air in an athletic way at Westminster for the past two years. There was friction according to well-founded reports, between the coaching staffs and President Wallace. This year, the basketball schedule was made a hit-and-miss affair through the action of the faculty in turning down two games scheduled with Duquesne, the refusal of the faculty to permit the Titans to meet the Dukes coming about a week before the first game was scheduled to be played.

Westminster officials, naturally, have refused to comment on the report of Lawther's return or on the situation in general. Lawther's resignation last year caused a furore in Westminster circles, the coach being extremely popular with the student body and with the alumni. When Dr. Wallace's resignation was announced, the rumor that Lawther was to return was started, and when both Beede and Harrison announced their intentions of not returning next year, the field was left open.

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: WASHINGTON WAS TALLER THAN LINCOLN—According to Gen. Hugh Mercer, who was Washington's physician, the Father of Our Country was "as straight as an Indian, measuring 6 feet 2 inches in his stockings and weighing 175 pounds when he took his place in the Virginia House of Burgesses in 1759." On the other hand, we know that Lincoln always evinced a certain pride in his great height, exaggerating it by affecting tall hats and high-heeled boots. He was in the habit of measuring himself with every tall man he met. To this vanity we are indebted for a most reliable clue as to his real height. He was outmeasured by the huge Gov. Morgan, of New York, and repeated this experience with an unnamed petitioner who called on the President at the White House. Gov. Morgan's height is on record as 6 feet 2 inches in his stockings, and, as to the tall stranger, "he left the White House quite abashed that he dared to be taller than the President, while measuring 6 feet 2½ inches in tall boots." (See: Gen. Carrington's "Washington the Soldier.) WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY COMES EARLIER IN THE YEAR THAN LINCOLN'S—Washington was born February 11, 1731. At the time of his birth, the old style calendar was in effect in England and its colonies and the New Year then began on March 25. The Calendar Reform reduced September, 1752, by 12 days, and, at the same time, the commencement of a New Year was advanced to January 1. THE STONE THAT IS A GOD—The White Stone I depicted is worshipped as a God possessing great healing powers. Its temple, to which pilgrimages are made for the purpose of invoking its divine curative powers, is situated on the Yangtse River, near Suifu, in the province of Szechuan, China. Millions of people believe this stone is a God. (See: "Religion in Szechuan Province," by David C. Graham.)

TOMORROW: THE WHALE'S TOMB.

SAM DREYFUSS LAID TO REST

Charles A. Stoneham, president, and James J. Tierney, secretary, of the New York Giants, were among the visiting notables here today for the funeral of Samuel W. Dreyfuss, vice president and treasurer of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who died Sunday from pneumonia. Others included Harvey Traband, secretary to President John A. Heydler, of the National League, and Louis Propst, former president of the Columbia Club, of the South Atlantic League.

The services were held in the late home of the young baseball executive, Morewood Gardens, with Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson, of Rodef Shalom Temple, officiating. Interment followed in West View Cemetery. Messages of condolence continued to pour in to Mrs. Samuel Dreyfuss and Mr. and Mrs. Barney Dreyfuss, the parents of deceased, from all parts of the country today.

The honorary pall bearers were: Hon. Frank J. Harris, Samuel F. Waters, John G. Howley, J. Rogers Flaherty, C. B. Ackleworth, John Conn, James J. Adler, Kenneth Sears, Theodore Boehm, Jr., and Gladwin Theobald. George Rea, Edward Benswanger, Edgar Lewis, Walter S. Dr. Edwin Zugsmith, Dr. A. R. Gould, Dr. Robert Zugsmith, Frank Kronheim, Dr. Frank Patrick, K. F. Kenawell, Raymond J. Miller, Carl W. Eisle, Samuel Ginsberg, Eugene Arnfeld, Frank Wertheimer, Hudson Samson, James J. Long, Dr. Joseph Matson, Daniel Harrison, C. H. Herr, William W. Hutchings, Richard Fisher, Clark Miller, Artemas Leslie, Nathan Kaufmann and Edgar Hirsch.

SPORT VIGNETTES

"Idle Tankers in Whale Trade," reads a headline in the news section . . . If that were on a sports page we would know without reading further that it referred to second-rate heavyweights doing piece work with the great Primo Carnera . . . . A survey just completed by the Boys' Club Federation of America, which embraces 253 boys' clubs, with a membership of 250,000, reveals the fact that the reason for the decline of interest in baseball among the youths of today is the fact that they lack the playing space as well as equipment, and a plea is being made for more and better diamonds and discarded equipment of the league clubs . . . . The survey further points out that, in communities where the boys can play the National Pastime, Babe Ruth is the popular idol, while in other centers, where they have got away from baseball, Col. Charles Lindbergh is the hero.

The latest in the way of heavyweight boxing scandal is the rumor that the Schmeling-Stribling bout for the title, planned as an outdoor feature, may be discarded for one involving Jack Sharkey on the theory that Sharkey must be included in the picture to assure the enterprise of attracting a paying crowd . . . They'll pay to see Sharkey win or lose and the logical match in the beginning was a return grapple between the Lithuanian-American and Schmeling or one between either Primo Carnera and Sharkey or between Carnera and Schmeling . . . Another bit of spicy gossip is that which hints that Mickey Walker, the middleweight champion, is "broke" financially, after having got all of the gold possible out of two titles, the welterweight and middleweight, and that is why he is so anxious, in his declining years, to make a splash among the heavyweights . . . He boxes Johnny Risko a second time in the first of the outdoor features of the year, at Miami, Fla., tonight.

Nat Moll, local jack of all trades in a sporting sense, has turned boxing referee. . . . He handled the Freddie Edwards-Jimmy McGraw main bout at East Liverpool, O., in fine shape the other night and is figuring on going into the business in a big way. . . . He has been a baseball, basketball and football player of merit in his time and also has been an announcer at Forbes Field and at the local boxing shows and has done some baseball umpiring . . . Miss A. S. Harrold, local star woman trapshooter, who was the runnerup for national honors last year, has just carried off the big prize in a tournament at Tucson, Ariz. . . . Don't forget that this is the night Paterson, N. J., spreads itself to do honor to Honus Wagner on the occasion of his fifty-seventh birthday. . . . A banquet for 300 guests, with a lot of notables on deck, will be the piece de resistance.

The keglers are at it again, with their annual A. B. C. tenpin tournament, which gets under way in Buffalo on Friday and continues through April 5. . . . The usual Pittsburgh district representation will vie for prizes, and this old town has dragged down its share of them in the past.—HARRY KECK.

CLUB BODIES TO UNITE

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Alex Pirie, president of the Professional Golfers' Association, attending the convention of the Club Managers' Association of America, being held in the William Penn Hotel, viewed the possibilities for better country club service among managers, professionals and greenkeepers in an optimistic manner following yesterday's closed conference between the officers of the Club Managers' Association and delegates from the P. G. A. and Greenkeepers' Association of America held in the Longue Vue Club.

"The three different organizations in the service of their club members are ready for the combination that will make their efforts more serviceable, more satisfactory and finer than ever," Pirie said.

Officers of the Club Managers' Association are expected to coincide with these views when they give their report on the convention floor today.

Thomas F. Carey, Sr., of the Union Club, president of the Pittsburgh chapter, this morning opened the business of the convention with a welcoming address, followed by the invocation, delivered by the Rt. Rev. Alexander Mann, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese.

Mayor Charles H. Kline and John L. Keeneghan, president of the Club Managers' Association were slated to give speeches this morning, while during the afternoon session, Henry P. Dutton, of the Boston Athletic Club national secretary, and Clarence (Buddy) Overend, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, were carded for floor duty.

PERRY MAY CAUSE TIE IN SECTION II

GAMES TODAY
CITY LEAGUE

Section I.
Schenley at Peabody.
Connelley at Westinghouse.
Fifth at South.

Section II.
Langley at Carrick.
Oliver at Vocational.
Allegheny at Perry.

W. P. I. A. L.
(Section VII, Playoff.)
Duquesne vs. Homestead, Pitt Stadium, 8:00 p. m.

Perry High School's formidable basketball team can bring about a three-way tie for first place in Section II of the City League this afternoon by defeating Allegheny, at present roosting in the leadoff spot by the margin of one-half a game.

Bill Campbell

The Allegheny-Perry clash tops the City League card, the Section I program being very ordinary, with the triple tie in that division practically certain to remain in effect. All three of the leaders, South, Schenley and Westinghouse, are in action, but all are prohibitive favorites to win their games.

In Section II, however, the situation is not so resigned. Perry defeated South Hills last week to knock the Tunnelites out of a tie for the lead and today can clamber up to a position on a par with the Hillsmen and with Allegheny at eight games won and three lost. Allegheny has been in more or less of a slump for the past two weeks, and unless the North Siders snap out of it today, their chances of winning the sectional title will be greatly reduced.

PLAYOFF LIKELY

A win for Perry today practically will assure a play-off series, for all three teams face comparatively easy games on closing Friday. A victory for for Allegheny, however, will toss Springer's club into a tie with South Hills.

Other games on the program today include the Schenley-Peabody, Connelley-Westinghouse and Fifth and South clashes in Section I and the Langley and Carrick and Oliver and Vocational affairs in Section II.

Tonight, in the Pitt Stadium, as a fitting prelude to the opening of the annual W. P. I. A. L. title elimination tournament, Duquesne and Homestead will clash to settle the issue in Section VII.

Bill Campbell's team looked like a winner as it went into its contest last Friday with Duquesne, for the Dukes had been defeated Tuesday by the lowly Elizabeth quintet. But Homestead faltered, permitted the Dukes to tie the game in the closing 20 seconds of play and then skidded more seriously as the Duquesners won out in an overtime battle.

If Homestead wins tonight, the Steel Workers will meet either Coraopolis or McKees Rocks in a first round game March 6, the contest to wind up the opening round of play.

SEASON CLOSES

The regular W. P. I. A. L. season comes to a close with tonight's contests. Feature games on the program include the Beaver Falls-New Brighton clash, in Section IV, where Beaver Falls, by winning, can sew up the sectional title. If New Brighton cops, then Ken Heider's club will represent the section in the championship series.

Coraopolis can sew up the gonfalon in Section IX by defeating McKees Rocks. If Scottdale can take over Mt. Pleasant, the Scotties will cinch the title in Section X. The complete schedule follows:

Section I.
Springdale at Freeport.
Arnold at New Kensington.
Tarentum at Har-Brack.

Section IV.
Beaver Falls at New Brighton.

Section V.
Donora at Monongahela.
Charleroi at Monessen.
South Brownsville at California.

Section VI.
Kittanning at Ford City.
Leechburg at Dayton.
Apollo at Vandergrift.

Section VIII.
East Pittsburgh at Turtle Creek.
North Braddock at Braddock.
Rankin at Pitcairn.

Section IX.
McKees Rocks at Coraopolis.
Bridgeville at Dormont.
Mt. Lebanon at Stowe.
Carnegie at Crafton.

Section X.
Jeannette at Norwin.
Harrison City at Irwin.
Mt. Pleasant at Scottdale.
Connellsville at Uniontown.

Section XI.
Wilkinsburg at Edgewood.
Verona at Oakmont.
Aspinwall at Etna.

Section XII.
Derry at Youngwood.
Sewickley at Belle Vernon.
East Huntingdon at Mt. Pleasant.
Perry at Dunbar.

Section XIII.
German at Bentleyville.
Brownsville at South Union.
North Union at Connellsville.
Mt. Marion at Cumberland.

Pitt, Tech Mermen To Meet Tomorrow

Pitt and Carnegie Tech varsity and yearling swimming teams will engage in dual meets in the Carnegie Tech pool tomorrow afternoon at 4:30.

The Panther teams never have been beaten by their Tartan rivals and will be out to continue their winning streaks. The Plaid Plebes, however, shape up as one of the best in the history of the sport at Tech and may upset their Panther rivals.

PASO ROBLES PAYS TRIBUTE TO DREYFUSS

Westminster Beats Bethany to Advance to Second Place in Tri-State Play

PIRATE SQUAD LAMENTS LOSS OF SAM

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

PASO ROBLES, Feb. 23 — All Paso Robles is quiet today out of respect to the memory of Sam Dreyfuss, of the Pirates. The pretty ball park, wherein the Buccos are wont to cavort, is barren and silent on Sam's funeral day, and the business men of the little town paid a tribute to the lamented Pittsburgher at the funeral hour.

Dozens of citizens of Paso Robles had come to know Sam intimately. It was he who transacted the business with the local Chamber of Commerce officials, and in all his seven years of visits here, the younger Dreyfuss was much sought for speeches by Rotary, Kiwanis and other clubs.

TRIBUTE TO SAM

It was a happy coincidence yesterday, and a tribute to Sam, when a prominent business man of the town stated that at this present date the baseball property of the town was free of all encumbrances, due to the yearly visits of the Buccos. A big debt hung on the property, but the Pittsburgh officials, largely through the hard work of Sam Dreyfuss, was able to get the local folks in a position which they cherish. Thus the civic organizations of the town were in sadness over the passing of the vice president of the team.

Ens called off all drills for the day. Shortly before 11 o'clock (2 o'clock, Pittsburgh time) Manager Ens and most of the veteran members of the club gathered in the pilot's room, where a vigil was kept through the minutes close to the funeral hour. The Paso Robles Springs Hotel, which has sheltered the Buccos through all the years, reflected the general feeling of the day.

ENS GIVES LECTURE

Each player wore a mourning band on his uniform yesterday. A day of ideal sunshine, Manager Ens called his men together at 10 o'clock, the skipper delivering a disciplinarian talk which required almost 30 minutes. Ens then escorted his big squad of players to the park, where a battery of cameramen awaited. Among the picture experts were the Hearst Movie-Tone men, so that the fans of the home section are likely to be able to see their favorites in battle togs in their home theaters.

Ens gave the cameramen every courtesy, and the day was so fine he allowed the athletes to remain out somewhat longer than he had intended. The drill, however, was very light, the pitchers and catchers taking things very easy as they enjoyed the sunshine. The weather, since the arrival, has been close to ideal. Needless to say, Manager Ens and his gang are hoping for a continuation of the spring-time zephyrs.

The opening game of the County League playoffs between Fintex and the Duquesne Lafayettes, originally scheduled at the South Side Market House tomorrow night, has been postponed until next Tuesday night, and will be played in Duquesne.

The change was brought about due to the failure of the Fintex management to make arrangements for the use of the Market House floor, this hall having been previously assigned to St. John's of the Catholic Lyceum League, for its battle with St. Henry's. The Goldenson Vanities meet the Ycungwood (Pa.) Girls in the preliminary tussle.

MIDGET WOLGAST COPS

Comorosky, Here For Confab, Has Rash

Adam Comorosky, outfield star of the Pittsburgh Pirates, will not be able to accompany the second squad of Corsairs when it pulls out from Union Station at 9:50 a. m. tomorrow, it developed today, when he arrived from his home in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to talk terms with the management of the club.

Commy has developed a rash on his body from something that he ate a few days ago, and the physician to whom he applied for treatment this morning said he would have to remain in his care several days. During that period he will confer with President Barney Dreyfuss regarding the matter of signing his contract.

With Comorosky absent, the second section of the Corsair training camp party will consist of only Scout Bill Hinchman, who will be in charge; Bill Regan, the second baseman bought from the Boston Red Sox, and Outfielder Augustin Dugas. Shortstop Tommy Thevenow will join the travelers in Chicago.

Between Rounds

Mickey Feder, the so-called Iron Man of Dayton, Pa., is back where he began his boxing career after putting in several years in Ohio and around New York, and will be boxing under the management of Jim Buchanan, of Charleroi, when he engages Al Becker, of Sheraden, in the semi-final to the George Panka-Umberto Arce battle in the Moose Temple Friday night. He has boxed Harry Smith, Nick Testo and other good ones. A return bout between Harry Fine and Eddie Hebner is in the making for the second number, as a result of the hullabaloo over the decision in Fine's favor last Friday night. Marty Gornick and Frankie Portland, in the opener, round out the bill.

Joe Trippe, of Rochester, N. Y., is due to arrive in town tonight for his 10-round main event with Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, to be fought at McKeesport Thursday night. He is coming in ahead of time to assure the fans he will be on deck this time, following postponement of the show last week, when he was under the weather. Promoter Jim Mefifr announces that tickets sold for the show last week will be good this week without exchange.

Trippe has been matched to box Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, in the main bout of a show at Oil City, March 16.

Frankie Simms, Cleveland heavyweight, and Frankie Cawley, of Fulton, Pa., stablemate of Tommy Loughran, will box the windup of a show at Canton, O., next Monday night with Freddie Edwards, of Chester, W. Va., and Marty Mellace, of Cleveland, in the eight-round semi-final. Loughran will accompany Cawley and referee one of the bouts on the card.

Harvard Squash Team Cops Crown

Ralph A. Powers, of New York, was elected president of the United States Squash Racquet Association at an executive session.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—For the tenth time since 1915 Clarence C. Pell, of New York, captured the national amateur racquets championship yesterday, defeating the defending titleholder, Stanley Mortimer, of New York, 15-8, 15-6, 15-3, in the final round.

BISONS BATTLE THIEL QUINT TONIGHT

Bethany vs. Thiel, Greenville.
Wash-Jeff vs. Muskingum, New Concord, O.
Salem vs. Fairmont, Fairmont.
W. Va. Wesleyan vs. Broaddus, Philippi.
Bucknell vs. Penn State, State College.

Westminster College's lanky Titan basketball varsity moved majestically into second place among the tri-state colleges struggling for the sector's very mythical championship by serving the Bethany Green Bisons a 50-to-30 setback at New Wilmington last night.

The defeat was the second of the season and the second within a week to be handed Bethany by the Titans, and started the Buffalo Creek entry off on its three-game invasion of Western Pennsylvania very much on the wrong foot.

FACE THIEL TONIGHT

Tonight, the Bisons have to go up against Thiel at Greenville. The Lutherans have been inconsistent this year, but if they are on, they'll give the visitors a bucketful of trouble and maybe another licking.

Other games on the district card tonight provide for a clash between Penn State and Bucknell at State College; a meeting between Wesleyan and Broaddus at Philippi; a clash between Salem and Fairmont Teachers at Fairmont and a game at New Concord, O., between Wash-Jeff and Muskingum.

In tripping the Bisons last night, Westminster, from start to finish, held the upper hand. They started off with a rush to roll up a 6-0 margin in the first three minutes and by halftime clinched the verdict at 25-11.

BISONS HUMILIATED

Bethany made only three field goals in the first half and was still further humiliated during the greater part of the second session as the count at one time reached 41-19.

Brownlee, Titan center, was the big star of the contest with eight field goals. The lineup:

Westminster—50.		Bethany—30.
Douglass	F	Nash
Kocheran	F	Pollard
Brownlee	C	Telfair
Rice	G	Flading
Fisher	G	Jenkins

Score by halves:

Westminster	25	25—50
Bethany	11	19—30

Field goals — Douglass 2, Kocheran 4, Brownlee 8, Rice 3, Hamas, Rush 3, Pollard 2, Telfair 4, Flading. Fouls—Westminster 14 out of 15, Bethany 5 out of 11. Substitutions—Westminster, Hamas, Sijander, Arthurs, Bister, Considine, Williams; Bethany, Funk, Bruhn, Dupke. Referee—Beggs Snyder. Umpire—Kennedy. Time of halves—20 minutes.

The Tipoff

This second meeting between Pitt and Carnegie Tech, coming as it does Friday night, has to share interest with the opening of the W. P. I. A. L. elimination tournament. But the boys ought to put at least 3,500 of the faithful in the Stadium that night.

Carnegie failed to accompli.sh much on its three-game swing through the East last week but the set of defeats suffered by the Tartans at Army, St. John's and Temple does not detract from the fact that the Skibos have a real ball club. Pitt didn't look so hot against State, but then, Panthers seldom look very good against opposition not of the sternest.

A boy who will bear watching in tomorrow night's W. P. I. A. L. opener is young Eddie Gutowski, of Moe Rubenstein's Ambridge team. Gutowski is a big fella, tipping the beam at about 170 and stands an inch better than 6 feet in his socks. He plays a guard, and if necessary, shifts to center to spell Huk Yoos, the rangy pivot man.

Coach Chick Davies, of the Dubious Dukes, gave his squad a stiff workout yesterday and plans another for today. Tomorrow, the Dukes go to Morgantown to meet West Virginia. The team snaps out of the lethargic condition into which it plopped after the victory over Geneva last week, the Mountaineers will find easy pickings.

Ford City High, led by its crack Negro center, Bass, may be the dark horse of the W. P. I. A. L. tournament. The Section VI entry has been knocking on the door of fame for three years, and though it failed to survive the first round last year, losing a 19-16 verdict to Uniontown, the team looked like a real ball club.

Standing room only will be available for tonight's important Section IV game between New Brighton and Beaver Falls in Paves Gymnasium, New Brighton. Beaver Falls took Brighton in the first half of the sectional race in an extra period, chiefly because of superior work at the foul line. Tonight's winner takes the title. The schools have ever been hectic rivals, back before the day Referee Leo McGlinchy was chased out of town following another important meeting.

RACE BILL OFFERED

HARRISBURG, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Licensed and regulated horse racing and pari-mutuel betting on such races would be legalized by bills offered in the House last night by Representative Peters, Montgomery, and Charles Baldi, Philadelphia. Race meetings would be permitted between April 1 and December 1 each year.

JACKETS' PLACE IN ICE RACE IN JEOPARDY

By CARL W. SHATTO.

Although the Yellow Jackets will not swing into action again until Thursday, when the Windsor Bulldogs will make their final appearance of the season here, tonight's warfare in the International Hockey League will command the attention of local ice fans.

Tonight's milling will find London at Windsor, Detroit at Cleveland and Syracuse at Buffalo, and the Pittsburgh-Cleveland-London fight for third place is so close that a Cleveland or London defeat will shape up as a Pittsburgh "moral victory."

Today the local puckmen hold third place by the slender margin of one point, but the Jackets have played one game more than has either London or Cleveland. After tonight's contests all play-off berth rivals will have played the same number of games, and by tomorrow the standing of the clubs will have more significance than it has today.

MAY DROP TO FIFTH

In the event that both London and Cleveland win tonight, the Schooley icemen will be dropped to fifth place. The pain occasioned by a London victory will not be particularly severe, however, for it will mean a Windsor defeat, and a Windsor defeat will mean that the Jackets can clamber up to within a half-game of second place by downing the Bulldogs here Thursday.

President and Manager Roy D. Schooley, who accompanied his stalwarts on their recent road trip, when they extended their success string to five wins and four ties, is confident that the fight for positions will continue on until the last couple games of the campaign. He regards the battles with Windsor and London, at Duquesne Garden on Thursday and Saturday, as the Jackets' "key" games, and he is doing everything possible to prime his stalwarts for these fights. Schooley expects victories over Windsor and London to put his skaters in the play-offs, and he won't be surprised if defeats by Windsor and London leave his Jackets out in the cold.

REID WORKS TEAM

Coach Charles Reid, who favors a one-game-at-a-time policy when downing his doses of worry, is experiencing no trouble in convincing the Jackets that the fray with Windsor will be a bitter battle. The Bulldogs put up some furious fights here when their pay-off berth was not endangered, and Reid shudders when he contemplates entertaining Bulldogs who now are lashed on by the prospect of being on the outside looking in on the title play-off series.

Reid might get a little consolation out of the thought that a team that starts a stretch drive by rambling through nine games without a defeat isn't likely to fold up, but Reid is a tough man to console. Oh, well, the Windsor coach probably isn't feeling particularly cheerful either.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN,
The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Toledo was the last free drinking oasis in the Middle West. She submitted to prohibition with much the same frothy, light-heartedness with which a killer goes to the electric chair.

Tex Rickard's stock of liquors became a gold mine in value as one bar after another was closed in Toledo.

Tex Rickard.

On the night that prohibition wriggled onto the shoulders of Detroit, the citizens of that town, learning that Toledo kept open house and that the swinging doors still flapped in the breezes, drove over. Oh, they had to come in to get a last fill of whatever their choice in libations might have been.

The next day, the road between Toledo and Detroit looked like the one taken by Napoleon when he retreated from Moscow. There were 157 automobile wrecks along the route. Those liberty-loving Detroiters certainly got theirs! One of the most amusing cases of the on again, off again attitude of the Toledo dispensers of good cheer and quartet inspiration was the Secor Hotel itself. This place was Rickard's official stamping ground. The bar was a glorious haven for misunderstood men. It was gorgeous in cut glass, long stem wine glasses and mahogany front. The brass rail that went with it should have been preserved for the Smithsonian Institute.

A FAMOUS BAR

But the rumors of federal invasions and punishment for keeping open house in defiance to the prohibition edict had the manager of that nifty bar in a turmoil.

Every now and then he'd hear that a strange-looking snooper had just dropped off the train and it were best that he closed the bar. He didn't lock up. He'd simply stretch a generous length of red, white and blue satin ribbon around the front of the bar and warn the innocents not to approach beyond the silk deadline. This was a frightful blow to the visiting firemen, especially to those who had crowded around Jim Coffroth, of San Francisco, to partake of a new drink Jim had brought on from California. He called it an "orange blossom." Gin and orange juice, etc. It was brand new in the East and the more sincere among the drinkers had consumed so many of them that they began to take on a strange, yellow jaundice hue.

Just when the singing would be at its beautiful best, the killjoy manager would come in and order the silken barriers again strung out around the bar. In a half hour it would be down again. They were frightened out of their wits about the threat that they would be thrown into the bastile for an infraction of the temperance act. I think it was right in that hotel bar that nine out of 10 men decided to snap their fingers at prohibition for the remainder of their lives. It was when the silk rope went up that Rickard's rooms became the drinking spot of the whole world.

RICKARD USES STRATEGY

When Tex realized that no wine cellar, above or below ground, would be able to stand off that mad stampede, he took a vote for Tex. He quietly had Walter Fields, his court jester, remove the choicest of the brands and soon they were on their way to Rickard's quarters at the Biltmore Hotel in New York.

When Tex announced one day that "you fellers have sopped me bone dry," the panic was on for fair.

Some of the crowd found an old-time saloon where there remained some real groceries. The fellow that ran this place was an old "peter man," a retired and respectable safe-cracker. His place was a whackup joint. That is to say, the bank robbers and the "box men," the safe-crackers, would come in off the trail and cut up their swag.

I remember being in there, paying $1 a copy for precious pint bottles of Budweiser beer, when I noticed two fellows at the end of the bar methodically dividing a stack of bills.

"Nice touch old Day-and-Night Mike and T. N. T. Terry are running through the middle," said the broken-nosed bartender to me, throwing his eyes in the direction of the two. "Poor fellows. They're going out of here in a few minutes to face a cruel world with $30,000 apiece. And me a mere bartender."

GATHERING OF CLANS

Toledo was one place where the crooks of the country could light, but had to do so with "hands off."

It was an unwritten law that for the privilege of dropping in for a breather while a man hunt might have been on they were not to lift a crooked finger against man, woman or child in Toledo. The yeggman vowed that rule never would be broken, but, with the influx of Rickard's mixed crowd, the unwritten law was abused. The regulars kept their promise. It was the small-time sneak thieves and pickpockets that made Toledo an uncomfortable place in which to reside for a time.

I remember one day, out at Willard's camp, the crowd that flooded into big Jeff's training enclosure at $1 the head was a record-breaker. It was a playground for the nimble-fingered gentry.

Two greenhorns, with a bit of buckwheat sticking in their hair, were watching Willard go through his paces. As Jess wound up his work, these two fellows started out with the others. Suddenly one of them yelled:

YOKELS ARE "FRISKED"

"My wallet, MY WALLET! Jim, my WALLET is gone!"

All the time he was frisking himself, digging into his pants pockets, fore and aft. No use. It was gone.

"Well, Aza, didn't I tell you not to carry your money in your hip-pocket? Didn't I WARN ye? Didn't I tell you not to tote it there? DIDN'T I tell you to carry it in your inside coat pocket—here — where I carry my—"

He cut off abruptly. His face paled. His lips trembled and he shook with fright, as he shouted:

Geography meant nothing to Toledo's guest "dips."

"MINE'S GONE, TOO!"

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 24.—The first round of match play in the annual Dixie championship golf tournament is being contested here today. W. J. Koppel, of Pittsburgh, is opposing John B. Hull, of Great Barrington, Mass., in the sixth flight. Koppel turned in a card of 53-55—108.

Lee Chase and Jack Ahearn, both of Buffalo, and Harcourt Brice, of Miami, the defending champion, tied for the qualifying medal. Each returned a card of 75

TRADERS ENTER WEST PENN LEAGUE

By TOM BIRKS.

Any doubt regarding the league activities of the Duquesne Traders this season was suddenly dispelled yesterday, when a well-known Duquesne sportsman posted forfeit for the entrance of Tom Martin's classy team into the West Penn League.

Last season the Traders were the only club in this district to face an independent schedule, and Tom Martin, booking 76 games for his club, brought them home successful in 68 clashes after meeting the best clubs in the Tri-State district.

Martin is a veteran manager of the sandlots and has been part of the organization of many big clubs in this district. He was connected with the Homestead Aces for a number of years and itches to throw his organization against the Fertig club in league warfare.

This evening at 813 Liberty avenue, the Commercial and Industrial League, under the leadership of President Dick Mackey, will have its first get-together.

While it is impossible to state just what teams will make up the popular C. & I. this season, it seems almost sure that Reliance Life, last season's champion; Joseph Horne's, Gimbel's, Carnegie Steel, B. & O., National Union, Dravo Contracting, Reick-McJunkin, Mine Safety Appliance and others will be on hand.

Tomorrow evening the Mon-Yough League meets at the Hotel Main, and all clubs in that section are requested to be on hand.

WALKER READY FOR RISKO

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Promoter Pa Stribling will try to pry the lid off the 1931 heavyweight outdoor season tonight with a card featuring Mickey Walker and Johnny Risko in the 10-round final besides exhibition performances by the forthcoming championship rivals, Young Stribling and Max Schmeling.

He expects 25,000 customers to contribute $50,000 to $60,000 at the bargain scale of $2 to $5.

If it rains tonight, the show will be tomorrow night. The weather has been threatening.

New Leaders Brought Up As Market Hesitates on Profit-Taking Moves

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Trading today picked up the stock market where they had left it last Saturday and sent prices to new highs for the year in a broad and active upward movement.

There were momentary pauses for profit taking, but each period of hesitation was used for the grooming of new leaders. Oils and rails, which had been sluggish during the first outburst of buying enthusiasm in the busy early hours, later joined the rally. Coppers and chemicals were particularly strong, although utilities and industrials shared prominently in the market's exhibition of courage.

The operations was very active with blocks of 1,000 to 5,000 shares numerous. Several, including Radio and Westinghouse, changed hands in even larger amounts on the first sales. The turnover in the first half hour, 900,000 shares, was the largest for that period so far this year and the ticker fell eight minutes behind in recording transfers.

Since there was nothing in the week-end news to stimulate the market, the rise seemed based largely on momentum. Some commission houses said that aside from the following attracted by pools there had so far been comparatively little evidence of active public participation, but it was generally agreed that the excellent spirits created by the advance of the last two or three weeks was strengthening confidence in the business world. The extent to which the market has been discounting industrial recovery remains a matter for argument.

Bonds were slightly irregular, but activity in that market quickened as the trading day wore along. Issues governed by stock prices moved upward.

Money was a shade firmer. Sufficient withdrawals were made to stiffen the outside call rate to 1½ per cent, the official figure on the stock exchange. Demand at this time of year normally becomes larger as there is a movement of funds into the interior to meet March 1 settlements.

Bituminous Coal Output Increases

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Production of bituminous coal increased sharply during the week ended February 14 as compared with the previous period. Total output for comparable periods as calculated by the United States Bureau of Mines follows: Week ended February 14, 8,209,000 tons; previous week, 7,833,000 tons; same week last year, 10,224,000 tons.

LONE STAR AND BLAW KNOX STRONG

Steel Issue at New Top; Gas Issue Meets Steady Demand in Market Here

Prices displayed a firm tone on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange on the resumption of trading following the extended week-end holiday. Dealings were centered in Lone Star Gas in the early market, with the stock reflecting a steady demand at figures near the highest so far achieved this year. Other fuels were quiet and steady.

Blaw Knox continued to forge ahead in the industrial section. On very light trading during the first hour the stock went into new high ground for 1931, selling above 29 as against its previous high of 28¼ record last week. Road building programs and utility expansions are factors favoring Blaw Knox which manufactures products extensively used in both industries.

The general list showed no conspicuous changes, but a noticeably firm tone was evident in reflection of the sharp bulge on the New York market during the forenoon.

paying your bills by check

Few women today have failed to discover the convenience of a checking account. Instead of spending the greater part of the day going from butcher to grocer, to gas office and dressmaker, laboriously paying their bills in cash as their grandmothers did, they spend a few minutes a month writing out checks. For a few cents additional, they may command the services of a never-failing messenger—the postman. In due time the cancelled checks are returned—unquestionable evidence of payment of the bills. The check stubs, too, serve as a convenient record of expenditures, and an aid to budgeted expenses. Checking accounts, regardless of size, are always welcome at the Mellon National Bank.

Columbia Gas Position Affected by Growth

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

COLUMBIA GAS AND ELECTRIC CORPORATION has been going through a transition period in which it has been making enormous expenditures for the extension of its activities. Sufficient time has not elapsed for the new capital additions to be reflected in earnings. In addition to this the company has been pushing its expansion program to completion during a period of extreme business depression when established sources of revenue have been declining.

Results for 1930, in view of these exceptional conditions, have been satisfactory. The company today reported consolidated net income after taxes, interest, depreciation and depletion for 1930 of $26,498,753. After deducting preferred dividends this was equivalent to $1.76 a share on 11,684,220 shares of common stock.

Net profit for 1929 was $32,161,139 or $2.49 a share on 10,596,530 shares of common stock. In 1928 net was $29,155,583 or $2.23 a share. Figures for 1928 have been adjusted to give effect to the division of shares at the rate of 2½-for-1 which occurred subsequent to December 31, 1928, and figures for 1928 and 1929 have been adjusted to give effect to the 25 per cent stock dividend paid in common stock on March 31, 1930.

Earnings on the actual number of shares oustanding at the close of 1929 were $3.12 on 8,477,224 shares and in 1928 they were equivalent to $6.97 on 3,372,692 shares.

Financing Necessary

THE REPORT INDICATED that additional financing will be necessary in the near future. The company has been forced to secure large bank loans to provide for the extension of operations, particularly in the gas portion of the business. Last January $50,000,000 of 5 per cent gold debentures due in 1961 were sold through a banking syndicate. These provided for the permanent funding of the major share of these loans but $19,601,093 of loans were still outstanding after giving effect to this financing.

Obviously, since the company still has a large amount of improvement work in progress, further issues of securities will be made. The form of this financing probably will be decided in the light of future developments. The company's funded debt of $159,376,500 is not large in comparison to physical assets of $594,007,280 and total assets of $719,306,395. Preferred stocks of the parent company and subsidiaries amount to $147,281,400. This indicates that it will be possible to use any form of financing which may seem desirable.

Results Not Comparable

COLUMBIA'S RESULTS FOR recent years cannot be fairly compared with those of other utilities. The pace of its expansion program has been far more rapid than the average for the utility industry. This development work has been in both the power and gas portions of the business. It has been particularly great in natural gas where Columbia has extended distribution into new territories, has played an active part in the development of new gas producing fields, and has been compelled to engage in the construction of vast pipe line facilities in order to tie gas producing areas to its distribution system.

Columbia is interesting to the investor, since it has added the possibilities of enormous future growth in earnings to an already well established business. It has an able and experienced management. Recent earnings results have been discouraging but it must be remembered that a period of three years is usually required to develop sales of gas in new territories. It must also be realized that the business depression is putting a greater burden on utility companies attempting to develop new fields than on organizations operating in older territories.

MAKING ONE DOLLAR DO THE WORK OF TEN

MORE than 80 billion dollars of our annual trade volume represent business transacted on credit. By means of credit the average dollar is made to do the work of ten. This credit fabric is held together by Stock Fire Insurance.

Underlying this vast commercial turnover, serves to give it the stability which credit demands, are the more than 150 billions of dollars the stock companies have at risk against fire, with an almost equal amount covering hail, windstorm, earthquake, and other hazards.

STOCK FIRE INSURANCE

performs many functions. The principal ones are: 1—Payment of losses; 2—Prevention of fire; 3—Stabilization of credit.

Stock Fire Insurance thus provides a service that makes the uncertain certain; that protects the individual's investments and shields him against disaster, that enables destroyed properties to be replaced.

Mary Lou Prepares to Live Under New Name

CHAPTER X.

"This is Miss Thurston," Margaret Lorrimer told him, "and she has just promised me she will try to carry out her part of your experiment."

They sat down. Mary Lou keyed up to meet any emergency now that her decision had been made. Mrs. Lorrimer anxious, hopeful and uncertain, by turns, and the physician as serene and matter of fact as if he spent half his time aiding, abetting and even suggesting deceptions on a large and unusual scale.

"The boy's asleep," he began. He could not think of Travers Lorrimer as a grown man, having known him from childhood, seen him through infantile diseases, broken limbs, bruised fingers and attended him for all these years since his shattered return from the war.

Doctor Explains

"When he wakes up I want to have a talk with him," he went on. "I have to make some calls presently, but I'll be back. Now, Miss Thurston," he smiled at her very kindly, almost paternally, "are you sure you understand the situation? Mr. Lorrimer is a perfectly sane and organically healthy man. But his war experiences have resulted in a mental depression which has affected his normally good health. He has no interest in anything, not even in life itself. He does nothing properly, neither eats nor sleeps nor exercises as he should. He—simply drags himself about, not caring, avoiding people, listless, hopeless. Mrs. Lorrimer has told you that while in London, on leave, he fell in love with a girl and believes that he married her. We do not believe that—that marriage part—as Mrs. Lorrimer's agents have found no records. Nor has she been able to find the girl herself.

"It so happens that you must bear a strong resemblance to Miss Harford. It may not be, of course, a case—let us say, of an actual double. But a good many years have passed since Travers saw this girl and we understand their acquaintance and courtship was of brief duration. His mental picture of her must differ from the actual girl he knew, altered by time. You know yourself how probable that is. He possesses no photograph or snapshot of her, the only one he had having been lost. Of course, today, she must differ very greatly from the girl Travers knew, and perhaps you do not resemble her at all, as she is now, if she is alive. But Travers does not realize the lapse of years in relation, that is, to her appearance. He only knows—or rather, thinks—that the girl he loved has come back to him, just as he remembered her. He is, of course, deeply disturbed by what he felt was your curious attitude toward him. I feel, however, and so does Mrs. Lorrimer, that your companionship and healthy outlook on life will do much to bring him back to himself. Once he is strong again, once he interests himself in outside matters, once he becomes a normal, perfectly fit man, the depression gone and his vitality returned, he will have a very different outlook on life. He can then be told of this deception we shall have practiced on him. And it may be that as he returns to normalcy he may begin to ask questions himself. Also I feel—and this is very important—that the point about his alleged marriage may be cleared up through his return to health. It is quite possible that he will remember the details, the place, the minister who married them . . . if such a marriage took place. Up till now he has been perfectly vague. He simply makes the statement that Delight Harford became his wife, and that is all. More than that he does not remember."

"But," Mary Lou asked earnestly, "if he thinks we are married? What are you going to tell him?"

Outlines Plans

"I am going to persuade him," Doctor Mathews answered, "that you thought him dead, that you were unable to trace him. As a matter of fact, it is quite possible that this unknown girl did not know his American address nor took any steps to trace him. She could have done so, of course, through the embassies, through the war office, but apparently she did not. Which leads me to believe, very strongly, that they were not married or that she is not now living and has not been for years. At all events I think we can shape up our story and be well enough rehearsed in it that none of us contradicts the other and that it will have some plausibility. I will explain to him further that your original knowledge of each other was brief, pursued under abnormal conditions and that you, very young, were swept off your feet emotionally. That years have elapsed, that you had thought him dead, that you cannot be expected to adjust yourself to the situation at once or return to the initial basis. I will tell him that, for your sake, and for the sake of his future happiness, as well, you two must begin all over again. With friendship, comradeship, growing to know one another, in order to be quite sure of the genuineness of the original attraction. I think he will see my argument and that you need not worry, and during this, well, period of probation, I have great hopes that your companionship will bring him back to himself; and all our questions will then be answered, all our uncertainty cleared up. Are you sure you are willing to undertake this, Miss Thurston? It won't be an easy task, you know. It will be a very hard one and will often be discouraging, I think. And you are very young."

Her New Name

"I'll do my best," she promised, gravely.

Doctor Mathews rose.

"Remember who you are," he reminded her, smiling. "Forget Miss Mary Lou Thurston. Think yourself into the part. You are Delight Harford, an American girl who lived in London for some years and who is meeting again, through strange chance, a man with whom you were once in love, to whom your presence, your reappearance in his life, means everything. After I have seen Travers again, you and I and Mrs. Lorrimer can arrange the details of the masquerade. Remember, you will have many unexpected pitfalls to avoid. And we'll stand by."

He shook hands with her and left the room. Mrs. Lorrimer went with him to the door and spoke with him for a time in the hallway, then she returned to Mary Lou, who was being amazed to find that her hands were cold with excitement, although her face was flushed.

"I'm going to take you to your rooms," Mrs. Lorrimer told her. "They are right off mine, a suite which belonged, as long as she lived, to my sister, who came to stay with me shortly after the death of my husband and who followed him three years later. I think you will be happier, near me," she went on, slipping her arm through Mary Lou's, "and, as I had the rooms redecorated last year, I hope you will find them pleasant."

They went through Mrs. Lorrimer's bedroom to a suite of three rooms, not very large but very attractive and comfortable. There was a small, charming sitting room, decorated in blue and silver. Silver tea-box paper covered the walls. The draperies and rug and small tub sofa were in deep, sapphire blue. The contrasting color was a mellow, sunny primrose, used in cushions and accessories. There was even a little, quite authentic, fireplace with a beautiful mantel.

Mrs. Lorrimer opened a door and disclosed a deep, cedar-lined closet, with built-in shoe and stocking boxes and racks for hats.

Will Tell Larry

"Do you like it?" she asked, anxiously.

"I love it!" cried Mary Lou, wandering about, happily, looking at everything with interest and pleasure and excitement.

"It is becoming to you," Mrs. Lorrimer told her, smiling.

She went back into the sitting room and drew Mary Lou down beside her on the squat, amusing little sofa.

"What are your plans, regarding your people?" she asked seriously. "They will send your things out, will they not?"

Mary Lou thought a moment.

"If I could telephone," she said, "to Larry Mitchell. I'll have to take someone into my confidence, and I would rather it were he. I will write Uncle Howard and Clara," she went on, as if to herself, "and I will tell them and Larry the truth. Larry can write me, under—" she stopped and smiled—"under my new name. He can attend to sending out my things. I haven't very much," she confessed, "and of course, as neither Aunt Adelaide nor Gram ever dream of writing a letter, I won't have to do any unnecessary explaining to them. They have a 'phone and I can say that I have taken a position and am staying right on and that I will keep in touch with them about Billy."

To Get New Clothing

"You have a telephone right in this room," Mrs. Lorrimer reminded her, "so it will be quite private. I'll give you things for tonight and see that you are made comfortable until your trunks come. And when the new arrangement has settled down into a routine sort of affair you and I will go to New York and shop for clothes, lots of them!"

Mary Lou flushed deeply, a little indignantly, and her chin went up.

"I haven't much, as I told you," she said quitly, "but I have plenty. I'd rather you wouldn't bother, Mrs. Lorrimer."

"Please don't be angry at me or offended," Margaret Lorrimer said, softly. "That plan was part of our bargain and was made for my own selfish pleasure, for I've always wanted a daughter!" She smiled appealingly. "When Travers was a little boy I used to envy all mothers of little girls; I always wanted to dress one," she confessed, "and now—now that I have a real live flesh and blood one you must permit me to indulge myself, just a little. You don't know what real pleasure it would give me."

Mary Lou said, doubtfully:

"But it doesn't seem fair—to you. After all," added Mary Lou bluntly, "I'm not your daughter!"

But she wished she were, in her heart. Mrs. Lorrimer looked at her and smiled.

"But you are," she said quickly, "if only—in make-believe."

DAILY TRUE STORY—Rose of Today

"A haircut and some music," Milt Arnold said to Tony, the barber, as he removed coat, collar and tie preparatory to getting into the chair.

Tony smiled, waved his clippers and jerked out the head-rest of the chair.

"I cut th' hair, Mist. Arnol', there's th' moosic—help yourself."

Milt selected a record, put on the repeating device and started the graphophone. He liked music at all times, and especially while having a haircut.

While Tony clipped and cut, Milt was trying to think of a hit. Song composers, from the would-be to the most successful, were like that—forever reaching out after something that would be that mysterious and profitable thing—a hit.

Milt Arnold was more than a would-be song composer. He was clinging to the fringe of Tin Pan Alley because of three of his compositions which, while far from successful, were selling to a degree and bringing in enough profits to make him understand what a real hit would be.

This dance record that was being ground out, over and over, had a certain measure throughout that interested Milt. It seemed to be a sort of "Lub la-le-lar!"

First Success

The haircut finished and Milt was getting into his coat when the idea came. He recalled what Tony had said about the music, to "help yourself."

That's what that queer little bit of melody was saying, "So help yourself!"

Milt paid Tony and started for his dingy little "office," which was furnished with a desk, two chairs and a piano. He was going to write a song-hit and call ' "Help Y urself!"

Just as he turned in from Broadway to go to his office he met Wanda Farley. The name was the inspiration of her booking agent. In real life she was Winnie Foster. She danced well and had a fair voice, which nearly always kept her engaged in some musical production or other.

"Hello there, Babe," he greeted her. "I just got a swell idea for a hit—fortune in it. Say, shall I be seeing you after rehearsal?"

"You and your million-dollar song hits," Wanda said, with a giggle. "No, I'm going out with a crowd—sorry."

"Help Yourself!" finally appeared. It didn't set the so-called musical world afire, but it helped Milt, it made a number of the Tin Pan Alley boys remark that it looked as though Milt Arnold had stumbled on to a hit. The song enabled him to get better quarters. He followed this with another, "Help Yourself to More," which was quite a hit.

Wanda Farley had come back from a tryout in the sticks with a musical comedy, for this was before the days of revues, and her show opened. She dropped around at the Moss Rose Cabaret after the show with some friends.

Someone announced that the next song would be Milt Arnold's big hit, "Help Yourself to More," sung by special permission. It wasn't song plugging then because the song had already gone over. It got a big hand.

Milt Depressed

Before she left Milt came in with a well-known member of a music publishing house. Milt looked like an illustration from "What the Well-Dressed Man Will Wear." Wanda spotted him at once and got another surprise. Milt sure did look prosperous, and prosperous men interested Wanda. She managed to catch his eye and he went over to her table and chatted.

"I'm going to let Milt take me home; I want to talk shop with him," Wanda said. So Milt took her home.

"Listen, Milt," Wanda said, as they stood in front of her apartment, "write me a hit, will you? I need a good song so as to be featured better."

"I'll try," he promised.

Milt Arnold wrote the song and gave it to Wanda. It proved to be just what was needed in the show and Wanda did put it over well, so well that she was featured.

Milt was able to hire someone to help him now. His music publisher recommended a girl who had worked for them at arranging and orchestration, Sue Ryerson. Sue was a quiet little girl who worked steadily and proved to be a great help.

Meanwhile Wanda's success had gone to her head. Her name was up in lights, her pictures in the papers and a great many more or less prominent followers of musical comedy, from back stage, took her out. She didn't have so very much time for Milt.

Milt took this very seriously, far too seriously, for Wanda wasn't worth a serious thought, much less a heart ache. The result was that he lost inspiration and ambition, and kept slipping.

Patient little Sue Ryerson did her best to encourage him, to urge him to write something new, but Milt believed that nothing mattered now that he had lost Wanda.

Meanwhile Wanda's show had finished its run. She was rehearsing for another, and things didn't go so well with her. Just before opening another girl was put in her place and that left her flat. Milt didn't waste any time going to her to see if he could help her.

She laughed in an irritating manner to hide her hurt pride.

"As if you could help me!" she said.

Milt was decidedly depressed after this. He went out and tried a few drinks. They didn't help any so he went to his little back room to try and sleep and forget it. A cigaret was burning some papers on his table. He picked up a book to use in smothering the slight fire. A faded rose fell out.

Milt had his idea. He worked through the night and when Sue Ryerson came in the next day he had his song, "A Rose of Yesterday." This was just at the era of sentimental ballads. Sue Ryerson worked with him.

The song pleased his publisher.

Once more Milt Arnold prospered.

Stewart, one of the partners of his music publishing firm, was having dinner with him one night and they were talking shop.

"Milt," he said, "you came across just in time. I don't believe Sue could have held out much longer."

"What do you mean?"

"Sue Ryerson—by good rights she ought to have half of your royalties, the way she used to do outside work to keep the place going," and then Stewart told him things that he never suspected.

A New Sweetheart

It was a revelation to him. He began to study Sue. He began to realize that she was one wonderful little girl. Most girls would have quit him long ago. He wondered why she did it.

One night he stopped in at a second-rate cabaret to hear a friend's new song plugged. To his surprise, Wanda Farley appeared as one of a shabby little chorus of six girls who marched about while another girl was singing. Wanda saw him and gave him a sweet smile.

The next afternoon Wanda came to Milt's office.

"Milt, dear," she gushed, going to him as though she owned him, "I have found that I just can't live without you—your 'Rose of Yesterday' has come back to you."

"That so? Well—"

"My, but isn't my honey boy all dressed up!"

"Listen, Wanda; you're a trifle late. I'm not interested in my rose of yesterday, she was just a fair-weather rose, and I'm all dressed up because I'm on my way to marry my rose of today!"

He went over to the old fashioned high-top desk and Sue Ryerson emerged. She had been sitting back there all the time.

Milt introduced her.

"Sue is my rose of today—and forever. We're on our way to the City Hall now, drop in any time," Milt said.

An Important Victory

Short Haul Case Calls Attention to Weakness in Public Service Law.

Pittsburgh industry gained an important victory yesterday when the Public Service Commission ordered reductions in short haul rates on steel products. This action will remove the burden of excessive charges for shipping steel from mills to fabricating plants within 50 miles of the city.

The increased rates put into effect by the railroads on May 20 more than doubled many of the tariffs for moving steel. The shippers petitioned for a restoration of the old rates. Instead of granting this request the commission ordered reductions which kept the rates on a mileage basis. Preliminary studies of the new rates by traffic men indicate that shippers will be materially helped although they will not secure all the relief desired in some cases.

The great lapse in time between the announcement of the rate increases last May and the order of the commission yesterday, calls attention to a fundamental weakness in the Public Service Commission law of this state.

In other states increased rate schedules were temporarily suspended while the commission made investigations. Shippers in competing districts were never forced to bear the burden of higher freight charges.

In Pennsylvania, however, the commission has no power to temporarily suspend rates and railroads or utilities are allowed to announce increases before obtaining permission from the commission.

It has been estimated that it cost Pittsburgh industry over $1,000,000 to pay the higher rates during the nine months in which they were in effect.

Five to One

There Is No Question That Overwhelming Majority of People Here Favor Repeal of Blue Law.

Eleven mass meetings were held in or near Pittsburgh Sunday to protest against any change in the Blue Law of 1794. That is the law which makes it a crime to indulge in innocent amusements on Sunday.

It is to be hoped the Legislature will not be deceived by the demonstration into believing that sentiment here is strongly in favor of the Blue Law. It is NOT—on the contrary, most of the citizens would like to see the Sunday laws made more liberal.

The statement is not a mere expression of opinion. It is not guesswork. It is FACT, accurately determined by a post-card poll conducted by the Sun-Telegraph.

Ballots sent to the voters on which to indicate their attitude on the Blue Law showed a five-to-one majority in favor of a change, with most of the voters urging repeal. Only two of the municipalities in Allegheny County—Edgewood Borough and Richland Township—indicated a desire that the statute should remain on the books.

The people want a change, and there is no good reason why they should not have it, since there is nothing in the proposed legislation that will interfere with the rights of those who wish to spend Sunday as the law now requires.

How About It, Mr. Park?

The Public Would Like to Know If the Law Has Been Broken in the Purchase of City Supplies.

Has the law been broken in the awarding of contracts by the City Department of Supplies to high bidders?

Has it been broken in the purchase of supplies without competitive bidding?

Has the crime of malfeasance been committed in the management of the department?

The questions are for District Attorney Park to answer.

Certainly if one-half of the charges of trickery and reckless squandering of the taxpayers' money that have been published during the last three weeks in connection with the complaint against Director Succop are true, there seems good reason for a grand jury investigation.

Resignation or dismissal of Director Succop will not make the inquiry any the less desirable.

Healthy Children

Pittsburgh has a Fine Record in Respect to the Care Taken of Tots' Physical Welfare.

Miss Helen V. Stevens, of the Public Health Nursing Association, reports that Pittsburgh stands third among 15 cities of Pennsylvania in respect to the care taken of the health of children between the ages of one and six years.

This gratifying state of affairs is not the result of chance, but has been brought about by the activity of various organizations which have interested themselves in seeing that tots secured physical examinations and were protected against various diseases. With regard to diphtheria our position is not so good, the city having dropped to seventh place.

Much of the credit for the health of local tots belongs to the Child Health Council of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, which has been very active during the last year. The Pennsylvania Department of Health considers the local association "one of the best organized of its kind" and "a real power for physical welfare throughout the population it serves."

More power to the Health Council!

A Vanished Town

The Fate of Barclay, Pa., Gives Economists and Philosophers Something to Think About.

Visiting the ruins of great cities that flourished thousands of years ago, Americans ask themselves if our towns are also destined to pass. A bulletin from the Pennsylvania Game Commission reminds us that right here at home we have a number of instances of the decay and extinction of what only a comparatively few years ago were prosperous communities.

The commission announces that it has purchased for a game preserve the site of what was once the flourishing town of Barclay, Pa. Barclay, in Bradford County, had a population of 2,000. There were three churches, a sawmill, several coal mines, even a skating rink. Now not a single building remains, and the only inhabitants are wild animals, bringing to mind the quatrain in the Rubaiyat:

They say the lion and the lizard keep
The courts where Jamshyd gloried and drank deep;
And Bahram, that great hunter—the wild ass
Stamps o'er his head but cannot break his sleep.

Barclay passed when the coal and timber on which its industries depended were exhausted. It had no other resources on which to fall back. Pennsylvania has many other cases of the same sort.

These vanished towns proclaim eloquently the desirability of diversified industries.

Fruit of the Tree

By Nelson Harding

A harvest of unwholesome fruit
Has grown upon this tree
Because the growth is rooted deep
In smug hypocrisy.

The serpent in its cover finds
An ideal lurking place
And there temptation, cynical,
Displays its crafty face.

THINK IT OVER

Drawn by Hal Coffman.

Bound, gagged and held for ransom, there is not much chance for this man, you say.

You are quite right.

Nobody gets far, tied hand and foot, with a handkerchief around his mouth so that he cannot even call for help.

But that is the plight of many. Debt, booze, gambling, extravagance hold them down.

You are sorry for this poor fellow, no doubt, but he deserves little sympathy. No gangster or stick-up man pinioned his arms and left him helpless.

He put the ropes on himself, and only he can take them off.

Nobody else on earth can do it for him, "and you may lay to that."

The Greatest Woman Mathematician

By Archibald Henderson

In this day of woman's emancipation, when all the avenues are open to all, regardless of sex, women are displaying great talents in many fields of science. The colleges and universities contain many women teachers; and science counts among its votaries women of no mean order of ability. The late Charlotte Angas Scott, professor of mathematics at Bryn Mawr College for Women, was a mathematician of some eminence; and a number of women mathematicians in this country today contribute to scientific journals and present the results of their research before scientific bodies.

Perhaps the only truly eminent woman mathematician in history, the results of whose research are well known and preserved, is Sonya Kovalevsky. She was born in Moscow, Russia, about the year 1850. The story of her life has been entertainingly told by Isabel F Hapgood and Anna Charlotte Leffler. It was from her uncle that Sonya Kovalevsky first received inspiration for scientific studies.

Although he had not systematically studied mathematics, he had acquired considerable knowledge and was in the habit of philosophizing aloud regarding some of the curious problems of mathematics. "I heard from him for the first time, for example," relates his niece, "about the quadrature of the circle, and about many things of the same sort—the sense of which I could not, of course, understand as yet, but which acted as an inspiration, imbuing me with a reverence for mathematics, as for a lofty and mysterious science, which opened out to those who consecrated themselves to it a new and wonderful world not to be attained by simple mortals."

A singular incident during her childhood exercised a curious influence in turning her mind to mathematical reflections. In papering the walls of their country home, sheets from Ostogradsky's lithographed lectures on the differential and integral calculus were pasted on the walls of one room. The sensitive girl, full of a natural curiosity, spent much time in poring over these sheets, with their curious symbols. Although they were incomprehensible to her, they became engraved on her mind; and when at the age of 15, she began to study the differential calculus, her teacher noted with astonishment the celerity with which she "grasped and assimilated the conceptions of the terms and derivations just as if she had known them before."

At the age of 17, Sonya accompanied her family to St. Petersburg. She was exceedingly ambitious, and wished to go away to some other country to pursue her studies at a great university. She ran away from home, and married a young man by the name of Kovalevsky, who also wished to complete his studies at some important institution. They soon went to Heidelberg, where she studied mathematics.

After studying for two years at Heidelberg, where she attracted the favorable attention of Konigsberger and Kirchhoff, she went to Berlin and studied for four years under the tutelage of Weierstrass, the father of mathematical analysis. For three mathematical treatises she wrote under the direction of Weierstrass, she received the degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of Goettingen. For a time, following separation from her husband, she served as professor of mathematics at the University of Stockholm. Later she removed to Paris, and gained world-wide distinction by winning the Prix Bordin, awarded by the French Academy of Science. At her death in 1891, notable honors were paid her by mathematicians from many parts of the world.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Liberty—

You're always clamoring for it—so am I. But I wonder how much of it either of us could stand!

Liberty—what a beautiful vision it is.

What noble, generous acts we'd perform—if we were free! What high adventures we'd dare! How hard we'd work!

We're sure of it. We're sure that the only thing that is holding us back from this abundant life is our bondage to bosses, families, laws, conventions. If we could only shake off those shackles—if we could stand on our own feet and dictate our own terms, there'd be no holding us. We'd show 'em!

But would we—really?

I doubt it.

I suspect that if someone handed us all the liberty we wanted we'd be yelling for help before the week was out.

For the truth is—freedom is no picnic. Liberty is the most expensive, lonely, difficult and dangerous condition in life. And only the greatest, bravest souls have been able to endure it.

The really free soul must live "in solitary." He cannot ask anyone else for instructions. He cannot depend on anyone else for comfort. Hardest of all, he cannot blame anyone else for his shortcomings. He must play a lone hand, carrying his own responsibility, facing his own consequences.

For, remember this—from one certain bond no soul can be freed. Even God is not free from—consequences. And that is the most dreadful part of freedom. You must bear your own consequences and carry your own blame.

Could you do that? I'll tell you straight—I couldn't! If the loneliness of perfect freedom didn't get me, my own cowardice and conceit would. I might manage to scramble through life without family, friends, boss or audience. But I could never get along without an alibi. Or a goat to take the blame!

Which is to me the best of arguments for having bosses and being extremely grateful to the thousands of humans who help you play the game.

Once upon a time I wouldn't have acknowledged all this.

Once upon a time I felt perfectly able to boss my own life, and every one else's.

I even gave God pointers.

But I'm all over that now. I know I can't be freed. I know I couldn't bear freedom. I know that I'm under an enduring debt to every life that touches mine, and, though you might never suspect it, I'm extremely humble and grateful.

Wise Words

Literature is the thought of thinking souls.—Carlyle.

Self-love is the greatest of all flatterers.—La Rochefoucauld.

The nobler and more perfect a thing is, the later and the slower it is in reaching maturity.—Schopenhauer.

Every man is a missionary, now and forever, for good or for evil, whether he intends or designs it or not.—Chalmers.

The last, best fruit which comes to perfection, even in the kindliest soul is tenderness toward the hard, forbearance toward the unforbearing, warmth of heart toward the cold, philanthropy toward the misanthropic.—Richter.

Isn't It So?

Fortune sometimes favors those she afterwards destroys.

It is easier to use your emotions than it is to think.

The man who has designs on women is usually a fashion artist.

Faith is the ability to believe the things we suspect are not true.

There is a safety appliance for nearly everything except a wagging tongue.

The trouble with the man who insists upon fair play is that he always wants to be the judge.

The trouble with people who call a spade a spade is that they are not satisfied to stick to spades.

Text For Today Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.—Matthew, v:4.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

Doctors Understand Women.

Nearly every man understands one woman or one type of woman—but only a doctor understands all women. * * *

Of course, all of these modern Lotharios and campus cavemen have their little tricks and wiles for making weak women weaken; but they flatten out and become helpless in the presence of a cool-headed, sophisticated young woman with a skeptical eye and a way of looking straight through them.

A doctor is different. After a few years spent among perfumed boudoirs, tears, nerves, disinfectants, hypochondriacs and smelling salts, NO WOMAN can fool him.

He knows, at a glance, whether it is a real attack of cardiac trouble or only a case of acute hysteria because the Boy Friend forgot to call up or the husband won't come across with the price of a trip to Paris. He knows, almost without counting her pulse-beats or looking into the whites of her eyes, whether she needs a sedative, a stimulant, an operation—or only a little flattery, a new hat and somebody to hold her hand and agree that she "suffers."

Moreover, a doctor knows how to make a woman feel sorry for herself or ashamed of herself or delighted with herself as the case may demand. He knows when to remove her inferiority complex and pep up her vanity, when to scold her out of her hallucinations, when to jolly her, and when to condole with her.

* * *

A doctor knows that a woman has just GOT to emote now and then or something will happen. So he permits her to emote for his benefit, at so much per emote or so much per gasp. And he is wise enough to look grave and pretend to take her seriously while she is emoting, instead of rushing out and slamming the door behind him, as a husband would.

* * *

Doctors have cured lots of feminine ailments just by their genius for LISTENING. If a doctor will only LISTEN until a woman has gotten her last symptom out of her system, he has her half-cured, and can safely advise her to get up and go out to a matinee.

* * *

If the average man knew as much about his wife as her doctor does, there would be no divorce problem.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Wall street has been the target for many odious comparisons. A Britisher refers to it as a suction pump sucking the world dry of capital. Others flay it as an ant heap destroyed by mere rumor, as the moneyed depot of despair, the terminus of hope.

Yet in mere physical aspect it is a languid thoroughfare. Broad street, running off to the right and left, is a more impressive financial center. The stock exchange is really there and also until recently curb brokers fidgeted about in this wide street.

Legend has it Wall street as the pulse of the nation originated in a daily meeting of nine brokers under an old elm near the close of the Eighteenth Century. These nine gradually expanded to more than 1,100.

The wonder of the stock exchange, which really typifies what is known in the vernacular as "Wall street," is not in its whirligig haste and cyclonic gyrations but how, in all the confusion, great deals are carried on with the accuracy and speed of a watch tick.

There are seldom exchanges of paper on the confusing floor of the stock exchange. Sometimes a deal that goes into the hundreds of thousands or even millions is consummated with the quick nod of the head. Fortunes are gained and lost by the lift of a hand.

Constantly there are shouting voices but these are announcements mostly. The stock exchange from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. is really a constant battle between those forces known as "bulls" and "bears". One side shoves prices up and the other pulls them down. And sideline suckers pay for the fun.

The vermiculating old Maiden Lane district downtown has lost much glamour. It once rivaled Antwerp as a diamond center, but merchants have scattered to diffusing points uptown. The market is no longer centralized.

Among names plucked from recent theatrical programs are: Eddye Adams, Angelyn Nouvaine, Roland Rawshoo and—here is a one—Ahi Arende.

For years he has been a purist who looked upon the sweep of modernism as depraved. His home in the country is candle lit, his warmth comes from log fires and his water is drawn from a well. Today he looked about my recently furnished quarters with a sort of Tudor resentment. There was not one word of praise and he has me so flustered that as a compromise I'm in the market for a carpeted brick door stop or a hand painted skillet with a red ribbon bow.

My book shelves are of glass with chromium supports and with the right light on them at least have a sparkle. He kept pressing his fingers on the chromium and looking quickly to see if it left prints. The fact it does seemed to mean something terrible, for he shook his head. One thing is certain, if I ever become fed up on the modernistic and go Tudor I'll never snoop around pressing other folks' chromium.

If Gabrielle Chanel, the Paris dressmaker, comes to America to fashion styles for the movies, it will be another step in the meteoric career of one of the most fascinating women of present day Paris. Her establishment, Chanel's, in rue Cambon, is one of the largest in Paris and she is reputed worth $5,000,000. She was a former midinette—a waif from Marseilles—and has been the favorite of two dukes, Duke Dimitri, of Russia, and England's Duke of Westminster. She was first to wear a cloche hat in ublic. Mlle. Chanel is brunette, small, slender, piquant.

I waited in the perfume shop of Chanel's on the ground floor with Henry Sell for our wives who were watching a mannikin parade on the floor above. Chanel fluttered in and began chirping to Sell, th n editor of Harper's Bazaar. She is the only woman I ever saw whose eyes seemed to change color—glinting green, then blue and what seemed a tigerish yellow. Nowhere before or since have I ever seen a creature so magnetically animated. No wonder she had a couple of dukes running a temperature. I went to my hotel slightly feverish myself.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You wish you were better understood.

Even members of your own family do not seem to comprehend your viewpoints on subjects discussed in your home.

In mingling with others you find many who do not sympathize with you in other ideas—your actions and general conduct.

You go about with a chip on your shoulder or you are depressed because you are so generally misunderstood.

You feel that the majority are out of step because they do not swing along with you.

You wonder how they can be so dumb that they misunderstand you.

Think this over; if you are so different from the majority, you are the one who is odd and peculiar.

Why do you consider your ideas superior, your thoughts more sound, than those who differ with or censure you?
